MEXICO MASSES TROOPS

THIS IS GIBLIN

He is the 250-pound, 6-foot East Boston politician, who is charged with a brutal assault on Editor "Jim" Maguire (5 ft. 8 and 160 pounds) at Orient Heights yesterday.

GIBLIN Surrenders

THAW'S WIFE NEAR COLLAPSE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 7.—More than a dozen armed plain clothes men were put on duty at the Princess Theatre to protect Evelyn Nesbit Thaw from what the police believe to be an attempt to drive her out of the city.

"I am near a nervous breakdown," declared Evelyn, almost tearfully. "If this strain continues, I may have to cancel my engagement.

"I am at a loss to understand who could have sent me such letters, but so long as I have the strength to work, I will not be frightened out of it and am determined to work for my little son just as long as ever I am able."

It developed today that a whole batch of threatening letters has been received by Manager Abbie Wright of the theatre as well as by Evelyn herself.

When Evelyn, who now has the whole city talking, left the matinee for her hotel, she had to fight her way through a crowd of men and women who swarmed the theatre entrance and the lane leading to the stage entrance.

So dense was the crowd that the car service on St. Catherine street, on which the theatre in which she is playing is situated, and the principal sleeping street in the city, was interfered with and the police had to be called upon to clear away the crowd.

Fought Through Crowd.

Evelyn herself, accompanied by Russell, her son, left the theatre by the stage entrance. After fighting her way through the alley leading to the stage entrance, she entered a waiting limousine and was driven to the Ritz-Carlton.

Chief Detective K. P. McCaskill of the Provincial Police, who has half a dozen men detailed on the case, is inclined to consider the threats which have been made as serious. He admitted there was considerable feeling over the Thaw case here, some blaming Evelyn for Thaw's present predicament. Public opinion here strongly favors Harry Thaw.

J. B. McNamara, the local manager of the Pinkerton National Detective Agency also has a number of men detailed on the case and everywhere that the little dancer goes plain clothes men are in attendance.

It was learned today that a number of Coaticook residents had arrived here. It was believed that some of the letters might have been received from this

East Boston Politician Tells Why He Struck Editor.

Representative Thomas J. Giblin of East Boston, sought by the police as a fugitive fleeing arrest for beating Editor James E. Maguire of the East Boston Free Press, was found today by an AMERICAN reporter while the Boston police were claiming they were making a widespread search for him.

The reporter found Giblin at his home, No. 12 Bayswater street, East Boston. At the same moment the police were declaring they had issued a general alarm for Giblin's arrest and would leave no stone unturned to find him.

Giblin denied that he was a fugitive. He declared he was waiting for the police if they wanted him.

Wife Furnishes $500 Bail.

Giblin declared that his counsel—George H. Lucy—called up the police, yesterday and informed them that he (Giblin) was waiting to be arrested. In the face of this the police did not arrest Giblin until today.

The arrest came today when Giblin, accompanied by his wife and his lawyer, appeared in the East Boston courtroom. Patrolman Edward Sprague—the policeman who witnessed the assault—walked up to the representative and told him he was under arrest.

In court Giblin waived the reading of the complaint. $50 was held in $500 for a hearing, one week from today. Mrs. Elizabeth Giblin, his wife, furnished the bonds.

Summoned by Telephone.

Giblin's arrest and arraignment in the East Boston court followed a telephone call to his home from Captain John A. Brickley of the East Boston police. Giblin answered the 'phone. This was the conversation:

"This is Captain Brickley."

"Well, Cap, I guess you're looking for me, aren't you?"

"Yes, we are."

"All right, I'll be right down."

With his wife Giblin went to the courthouse. He arrived at 11:15. Sprague approached him and said:

"I arrest you on this warrant charging you with assault."

The case was called then before Judge Joseph H. Barnes. Giblin waived the reading of the complaint and through his counsel pleaded not guilty.

Brother to Aid Prosecutor.

Attorney William C. Maguire asked the court's permission to appear for the prosecution. ..'s was allowed.

Attorney Maguire said:

"It was a very brutal and unaggravated assault. The victim is now confined to his bed in a serious condition. A police officer witnessed this assault. In view of the victim's condition, I ask that the case be continued one week and that the bail be placed at $1,000."

Attorney Lucy declared the charge one of "simple assault." He said his client had shown every inclination to appear in court and asked that the bail be made not more than $500.

Judge Barnes said he thought this amount was sufficient.

Mrs. Giblin gave real estate as surety and with her husband left the courtroom. The two walked arm in arm. The warrant gives Patrolman Sprague as the complainant in the case.

Attack Justified, Says Giblin.

Giblin did not deny that he severely beat Editor Maguire. He claimed, however, that what he had done was "justified" by Maguire's attacks on him in his weekly newspaper.

On the other hand, the friends of Giblin's victim—all of them indignant

INSANE PATIENTS 'TRIMMED'

WORCESTER, Nov. 7.—Amazing revelations of cruelty came at today's investigation of the Worcester Insane Hospital. They were coupled with attempts on the part of two of the trustees to bar evidence of a damaging nature and to "whitewash" the hearing.

The most sensational testimony was that of Arthur Peterson, whom Max Frankel, an attendant at the institution at one time, has accused of assisting to "trim" a patient. Peterson today told his story of the episode.

"Frankel came to me and said that the patient—Xides was his name—had broken his (Frankel's) glasses. He wanted me to help him trim the patient a bit. He was very excited, and grabbed Xides and jerkes him out of a chair onto the floor, then kicked him in the ribs.

Right Ribs Broken.

"I didn't interfere till Xides got on his feet. Xides seemed mad, and tried to attack Frankel, so I hit him on the jaw—not hard—but enough to quiet him and prevent him attacking Frankel."

Xides, it is said, had eight ribs broken. Mibran Vartabedian, another attendant, today testified that Peterson held Xides during the "trimming."

The attempt to hush up evidence came during the testimony of George Parsons, pharmacist at the institution. Dr. Samuel B. Woodward, a trustee, objected to questions as to what drugs were given patients, and said:

"I object seriously to the production of the book showing drugs given prisoners, whereby facts will be made public and will get into the hands of the press. I have a relative in the institution, and this testimony would have a tendency to make public the ailments of my relative and others."

Later, Judge John W. Mason, a member of the board, who was present for almost the first time today, said:

"I don't see why the press or the public should desire to go any deeper into these facts."

Dr. Michael J. O'Mara, chairman of the State Board of Insanity, allowed the presentation of the evidence.

The evidence presented today was put forward by Dr. E. V. Scribner, superintendent of the institution, in defence of the hospital against the cruelty charges.

8-Day Sentence for Starving Man

Admits He Stole Two Sandwiches to Keep Alive.

Frederick Smith, a young man of twenty-two, who lives on Sheafe street, Charlestown, faced Judge Bragg in the Charlestown Court today on a charge of stealing two sandwiches from Albert W. Miner's dinner pail in the Bolton & Maine freight yards.

Smith said: "I've been out of work for three weeks, your honor—flat on my uppers. I was hungry, and I took the sandwiches because I had to eat."

"Five dollars," said the judge—and in default of the fine, Smith went to Deer Island for eight days.

Judge Bragg said:

"You should work and earn your food. It is a serious offense to steal the noonday lunch of a man who works hard all day."

Names Fiance of Jessie Wilson

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Francis B. Sayre, fiance of Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of the President, was today appointed a Deputy Assistant District Attorney by Charles S. Whitman. He will only hold the position for a short time as he will become secretary to President Garfield of Williams College at the beginning of the new year. Heretofore, Mr. Sayre has been doing clerical work in the complaint bureau of the District Attorney's office.

Boy Cyclist Run Down by an Auto

George Belbin, a twelve-year-old boy, living at No. 26 Tucker street, Lynn, sustained a broken ankle, a fracture of the right leg and a fractured skull as the result of being run over by an automobile, owned and driven by James N. Moritt on Maple street last evening. Young Belbin was riding on a bicycle behind a tip cart and turned out directly in front of the on-coming automobile. He was taken to Lynn Hospital in the machine that run over him.

Street Car Kills Deaf Man of 80

NEWBURYPORT, Nov. 7.—Moses Brookings, an eighty year-old inmate of the Home for Aged Men, was driving cows near the home today and stepped in front of a street car. He was fatally killed. The old man was deaf and did not hear the car's approach. He leaves no family, but is a brother of Assistant Postmaster Brookings of Newburyport.

Heir to $75,000, Porter Keeps Job

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Peter J. Greene, assistant head porter at the Plaza, was still at work today in spite of the fact he had a letter telling him he had inherited $75,000 from an uncle in Ireland. "I'll wait till I see the cash," said Greene.

$250,000 in Rare Stamps to Museum

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—A unique legacy has been left to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in the collection of postage stamps, valued at $250,000, belonging to the late Max E. Bernheimer. It holds more than 50,000 varieties.

$12,000 Robbery from Private Bank

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 7.—The private bank of E. A. Dunbar & Co. at Montour Falls was closed today because of the robbery of $12,000 during the night.

U. S. Commission at Queenstown

QUEENSTOWN, Ire., Nov. 7.—The American commission appointed to study new safety devices at sea arrived here today.

CABINET BACKS HUERTA IN WAR MOVE

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 7.—The Mexican Cabinet has decided to support General Huerta and to prepare for war with the United States.

This decision was reached at a session that lasted from yesterday afternoon until midnight.

The request made by the United States that Huerta resign was fully discussed. It recognized that his refusal to abandon office would result in intervention by the American government. The Cabinet, nevertheless, decided unanimously to support Huerta in refusing to resign regardless of consequences.

After long consideration it was decided to delay the final answer to the United States government as long as possible. This delay will enable the Mexican administration to make more complete preparations for war. These are already under way.

TROOPS RUSHED TOWARD VERA CRUZ.

All the available troops from Puebla and other cities nearby are being moved to Jalapa, which is on the inter-oceanic road, near Vera Cruz.

So far no troops have been sent toward Vera Cruz from here, but the War Department is exceedingly active, and it is rumored troops will be sent from here tomorrow. The Thirteenth and Fifteenth regiments of rurales have been called here from Guanajuato.

Recruiting officers are very active in this city, rounding up men by hundreds for the army. So far only the lower classes are impressed, but there are rumors that better classes of young men are to be impressed into the army within a few days.

So great has become the fear of conscription that Mexicans whose work forces them to be out after dark have begun carrying credentials showing that they have steady employment.

It is said that not even women are exempt from conscription, many having been forced to become "soldaderas" who accompany the Mexican army and look after the men generally.

Americans and other foreigners are rapidly leaving here. All trains to Vera Cruz are full of people anxious to get out of the country before the storm breaks.

Bets were made here today that war will be declared November 22. The explanation is given of the sudden movement of troops toward Vera Cruz, but certainly there are no rebels there, and the reason must be found in the international complication.

Full details of the negotiations which have been going on here were laid before Mr. Lind by Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy.

THE FINEST LAXATIVE IN THIRTY CENTURIES

Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil Is Truly Tasteless—Not Flavored or Disguised.

For 3,000 years castor oil has been the world's best laxative, but until it was an offensive, sickening taste has limited its use.

For 3,000 years chemists have tried to remove that taste.

Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil is just what its name implies—pure, clear, tasteless oil without any taste. It is the purest product of Spencer Kellogg & Sons of Buffalo, large refiners of vegetable oils.

Anybody can disguise the taste of castor oil by mixing it with alcohol, wintergreen, peppermint or other flavors, but it remained for the Kellogg's to keep the oil pure and make it tasteless. Kellogg's Tasteless Castor Oil works even better than the old, oil does without pain or griping. Children take it easily.

Sold now in all drug stores, 25c and 50c. Ask for Kellogg's Tasteless and look for the trade mark on the label—a green castor leaf, bearing the Kellogg signature. Made only by Spencer Kellogg & Sons, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y., oil refiners.

TWO LAWLESS LOAN CONCERNS FORCED TO SHUT

Two more loan companies doing business illegally have been closed up by Supervisor of Loans E. Gerry Brown.

Announcement was made at the latter's office today that the Mason Finance Company and the Fidelity Guaranty Company, two firms which have been doing an unlicensed money-lending business for several years, had been put out of business.

These two concerns were located at No. 53 Milk street, and defied the latter for several years, according to Supervisor Brown, and have persistently refused to obey his orders, but have chosen, instead, to fight them in the courts.

The closing up of the two concerns was accomplished by Supervisor Brown, with the assistance of District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier. The latter, at the request of Mr. Brown, seized all the books and papers of the two companies. Such action has never before been taken by any district attorney in the country, in the prosecution of loan sharks, according to Supervisor Brown. The latter today praised Mr. Pelletier for his drastic action, declaring that it would have a great tendency to overthrow illegal money lenders in the State that those entrusted with the enforcement of the anti-loan shark laws "mean business."

Dr. Chas. McBurney, Noted Surgeon, Dead

Attended President McKinley After He Was Shot at Buffalo.

Dr. Charles McBurney, one of the most famous surgeons in the country, died today at the home of his sister, Mrs. Mary Schlesinger at Brookline, aged sixty years.

Dr. McBurney had been in semi-retirement for several years. He attended President McKinley after he was shot. After graduating from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, Dr. McBurney took medical courses in London, Berlin, Vienna and Paris. He then returned to the United States and became attending surgeon at Bellevue, St. Luke's and the Presbyterian hospitals.

His marvelous skill soon made him famous and in the 90's he gained the reputation of being one of the foremost surgeons in the world. He wrote many books on surgery that are considered classics and was a member of practically every medical club or organization of importance in America and Europe.

Dr. McBurney was born in Roxbury in the house known as the Amory house, which afterwards became the site of the Apollo Gardens.

Bank Men Throng Shubert Box Office

Long Line Seeks Seats for Performance Tuesday Evening.

Business men on Tremont street near the Shubert Theatre are breathing easier today because it is easier for customers to enter the stores. Yesterday the big crowd which gathered to purchase tickets for the performance of "The Honeymoon Express" next Tuesday night blocked the sidewalk from Eliot street to the box office of the Shubert. Members of the Boston Bank Officers' Association have practically bought the house for Tuesday evening.

Many of the bank clerks stood in line for two hours yesterday to secure seats. Girl clerks, messenger boys and not a few elderly bankers made up the long line.

John D. Keeps Old Hub Pastor on Job

CLEVELAND, Nov. 7.—Persuaded by John D. Rockefeller and others of his parish to remain here, the Rev. W. W. Bustard of the Euclid Avenue Church and formerly of Boston, said today he could not consider an offer from the Calvary Baptist Church in New York. The Calvary congregation, it is said offered him $10,000 a year, considerably more than his present salary.

U. S. Ranks Third for Coal Exports

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The United States now ranks third among coal exporting countries, according to a report of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce today. About $70,000,000 worth will have been exported by the end of the year. The United Kingdom and Germany are the only nations that export more.

U. S. ACTS TO END STRIKE IN INDIANAPOLIS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The federal government today took a hand in the Indianapolis street car strike situation. Acting Secretary of Labor Post instructed John A. Moffitt, inspector in the Department of Labor, to proceed to Indianapolis and co-operate in the efforts to end the strike.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 7.—The seventh day of the street car strike which has paralyzed electric transportation on every line in Indianapolis and caused 2,000 State troops to be quartered in the State capital, found no break near in the deadlock between the union street car motormen and conductors and the Indianapolis Traction & Terminal Company.

Another outbreak like those in which three persons have been killed during the last week will result in the establishment of martial law.

The likelihood of a general strike loomed larger today. President William G. Beatty of the Central Labor Union said that scores of leaders of other unions had implored him to call a sympathetic strike, and that he had delayed such action only in the hope that a peaceful settlement of the carmen's difficulties could be arranged. Beatty said he feared the unions would act independently and take drastic action.

Street car service will be resumed on all lines simultaneously tomorrow morning, according to plans announced today. The cars on each line will follow each other, keeping but a few feet apart. No tickets will be accepted and all the cash taken in by the conductors will go to the strikebreakers who man the cars. The three co-operating forces comprising patrolmen, deputy sheriffs and troops, will perform police duty.

The troops today remained in their armories. The application for a receiver for the Indianapolis Traction & Terminal Company asked for by Albert C. Pearson, was dismissed by Circuit Judge Remster today.

Reduce Linseed Oil Freight Rates

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today ordered a reduction of from 80½ cents to 65½ cents a hundred pounds on the rates on linseed oil over the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad from Minneapolis, Minn., to Paris, Tex. The commission also reduced rates on shelled corn from Hannah, Ia., to Warsaw, Wis., over the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad from 24½ cents to 19 cents a hundred pounds.

Directors Liable in Berlin Bank Crash

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 7.—United States Judge Ray has handed down an important decision in settling one of the legal entanglements resulting from the crash in the affairs of the First National Bank of New Berlin. In substance he holds that bank directors are liable to stockholders and creditors when through their negligence the bank fails.

WOMEN FIGHTING TO SAVE MRS. WAKEFIELD

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 7.—Probably the first formal petition which has been started for the commutation of the sentence of Mrs. Bessie Wakefield, sentenced to be hanged for the murder of her husband, is being circulated here today by Mrs. Sarah Devlin, secretary of the Fair Haven Political Equality Club.

The petition, which was drafted at a meeting of the club last night, sets forth that Mrs. Wakefield did not commit the crime of which she was convicted and should not be held responsible for it, that her age (twenty-four years) made it unlikely that she could appreciate the enormity of the crime, that she had not the moral training through life to lead her in paths of moral rectitude and that Pinw, who actually committed the murder, exerted a malevolent influence over her.

The petition, Mrs. Devlin said today, would be presented to Mayor Rice, State Attorney Ailing, who prosecuted Mrs. Wakefield, and possibly even to Governor Baldwin himself, although he is a member ex-officio of the Board of Pardons, to whom the petition is addressed. All the members of the club signed the petition.

Suffrage Organization to Act.

While opinions of some of the suffrage leaders of the State differ to some extent it seems likely that the State suffrage organization will take a stand against the hanging of Mrs. Wakefield on the ground that no woman should be condemned to die under man-made laws. Mrs. Thomas N. Hepburn, president of the Connecticut Woman's Suffrage Association, announced that a meeting of the executive committee of the association would be held next week to take action and possibly to appoint a committee to appear before the State Board of Pardons on December 8.

"It is my opinion that no woman should pay the death penalty when women are barred from participation in the law-making functions," said Mrs. Hepburn, "suffragists are opposed to capital punishment for either man or woman."

Miss Emily Pierson, State organizer of the Woman Suffrage Association, said:

"There is no plank in our platform other than equal suffrage. But capital punishment is a relic of the Dark Ages and should be abolished. It is not unlikely that Mrs. Wakefield was a victim of our demoralized social system. She is not to blame for that. We shall protest against her execution."

Fight for Condemned.

Mrs. William Bickensderfer of Stamford, who worked for the commutation of the death sentence of Mrs. Mary Rogers at Windsor, Vt., in 1905, and Mrs. Kate Edwards, in Reading, Pa., in 1902, declared yesterday that she would repeat her efforts and try to save Mrs. Wakefield. She saved Mrs. Edwards from the gallows.

Anti-suffragists express the belief that the laws should be enforced.

Overcome by the thought that she must now live within sight of the yard where she is under sentence to be hanged on March 4, Mrs. Wakefield, who was taken in a state of collapse from the county jail to the death cell in the State prison at Wethersfield, today became hysterical in her cell.

"I am so frightened," she sobbed. "They were kind to me at the other place. I am afraid they will be cruel to me here. If I could only see my babies, I am so sorry, so lonesome, so terrified."

Her personal effects—a Bible, a few books and papers, and a safety razor owned by James Pinw, her co-conspirator and the actual murderer of her husband, William Wakefield—were ordered sent to the unhappy woman's mother, Mrs. Frank Webster, in Middlebury.

Mrs. Webster has charge of Mrs. Wakefield's two children, Georgia, a towheaded six-year-old girl, and Clara Bell, four years old, a girl of some beauty.

Will Find Students' Earning Capacity

Harvard University Investigates Its Self-Supporting Men.

An investigation at Harvard University is now being conducted with a view of settling the two questions, "How can the college best provide employment for self-supporting students?" and "What is the average earning capacity of men while in college?"

To throw light on these questions, individual statistics are being gathered. Letters containing comprehensive questions have been sent to those students in the three upper classes living outside the Yard. Those men who live in the Yard, the majority of whom are seniors, will be personally seen by J. Bowington, '15, who is in charge of the investigation.

EX-SENATOR FLAGG, 74, WEDS A WIDOW OF 62

State Senator George W. Flagg of East Braintree, Vt., seventy-four, one of the largest timber owners in Central Vermont, and Mrs. Hannah E. Batchelder, sixty-two, are coming to Boston on their honeymoon today, following their marriage at the bride's home in Barre, Vt.

A brother of the bride, William Stowe, served with Mr. Flagg in the Civil War. He has succeeded Residents Christen Her "September Morn"—Identity Unknown.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—Clad in nothing more than the dense fog which has overhung Los Angeles harbor each morning for the last few days, a young woman has created a sensation among fine residents of Terminal Island by her peculiar action in indulging in an early morning surf bath.

Residents of the island who saw early morning there have christened the young woman "September Morn," and although many of them have attempted to learn the identity of the fair bather none has succeeded.

HOME RULE IN IRELAND NEXT MAY ASSURED

LONDON, Nov. 7.—The prediction that home rule would be assured in Ireland before the summer of 1914, was made here today following announcement of the parliamentary program in the session that opened Thursday.

The home rule bill will be the first thing to which Parliament will turn, and the government is positive of having it enacted by May 1.

Shoes as Important as Hats to Women

First step in fight on fashion is taken by Edward E. Allen of Cambridge, who is presiding at a meeting of the Massachusetts Homeopathic Medical Society in Boston Mansefield is also the first time the shoe question has come up in connection with the attempt to dictate to women.

"If the physician persists in paying so much attention to wearing apparel shoes as well as gold by the wearing of a hat, he ought to be wearing of a hat, I think women do not go around with women. It is a good thing to go unadorned occasionally. Many women wear shoes too tight to make their feet beautiful."

GET the FACTS

Let's ignore all distracting and unessential arguments and get down to the fundamental facts.

You buy clothing for style, for comfort, and for service, don't you? Now, as a good business man, are you likely to be able to buy as much of these essentials where clothing is made by an outside manufacturer and sold through somebody else's store, as you can at Shuman's where clothing is designed and tailored under one management and for one profit?

Argument will not change a fact. It is a fact that Shuman Corner clothing looks better, wears better, and fits better than other makes—it's guaranteed to.

BREAKS A COLD IN A FEW HOURS

First dose of "Pape's Cold Compound" relieves all grippe misery.

Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffling! A dose of "Pape's Cold Compound," taken every two hours until three doses are taken, will end grippe misery and break up a severe cold, either in the head, chest, body or limbs.

It promptly opens clogged-up nostrils and air passages; stops nasty discharge or nose running; relieves sick headache, dullness, feverishness, sore throat, sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

"Pape's Cold Compound" is the quickest, surest relief known, and costs only 25 cents at drug stores. It acts without assistance, tastes nice, and causes no inconvenience. Don't accept a substitute.

$15 Suits, $18 Suits, $20 Suits $11.50

To be exact, 631 suits that were right on our counters at $15, $18 and $20, merged into one lot and marked down to $11.50.

They are this Winter's newest models; they are hand-tailored; patterns are pretty. The fabrics are splendid Winter wear-resisting woolens, and there is variety enough to please any taste and fancy.

Chinchilla Overcoats
Worth $20 $14.75

If this were an ordinary value, that you could get anywhere else, 3,000 overcoats of one style fabric would seem staggering, but the fact that we bought the woolens six months ago, before the price went up, and had the coats made during the dull Summer months, and now when everyone's crazy for a Chinchilla Overcoat, we have the very coats, at prices impossible to duplicate elsewhere. That's the whole story.

Georges

Model Clothes for Men & Young Men

Special Note

The Balmacaan style is of English origin, first brought to this country by us early last season and introduced to the public as GEORGES. Added representation in Overcoats — the most sought-for and the most fashioned coat ever produced.

The BALMACAAN

Prince of New Overcoat Styles

(STORM-PROOFED)

$15 to $30

The Balmacaan holds the centre of the Fashion Stage this season. A big, roomy wide-skirted model, its draping fulness being accentuated by a kimono sleeve effect. Built of smart, scotchy imported Donegal Tweeds and soft-textured plain velours. Its utility is not limited to clear weather, as the fabrics are storm-proofed. In both extreme and modified models.

REMEMBER that GEORGES is famous in five cities as the Home of the Overcoat—and should the Balmacaan fail to meet your particular ideas there are hundreds of other styles here in every imaginable good fabric and pattern to satisfy the man of quiet tastes as well as he who demands the newest thoughts of Fashion. Prices range $12.50 to $50.

NEW SUIT MODELS

For Both Conservatives and Extremists

No taste need go unsatisfied in the new GEORGES suit stocks. The styles cover Fashion's broadest range from extreme slim-shouldered English models to those of the most conservative cut. In fabrics, pin stripes in blue, black and gray lead. Extreme dressers will be delighted with the new heavy chalk-line patterns built in our smart double-breasted form-fitting sack.

The determined effort to give greater value than ever, which is dominating the GEORGES policy this season, finds greatest expression in our Suits at $15, $18 and $20

The full price range begins at $12.50 and extends in easy stages up to $40. At $25 to $40 we offer the finest Suits it is possible to create, models of distinction and elegance.

CABINET BACKS HUERTA IN DEFIANCE OF WILSON ULTIMATUM

Dictator's Course Throws Capital Into Fever at Prospect of War.

ssey immediately after the arrival of the special envoy. Mr. Lind was accompanied by Captain William A. Burnside, the American military attaché.

News of the coming of President Wilson's representative caused a crowd of curious people to collect at the depot, but there was no demonstration. Mr. Lind and his companion were greeted by Mr. O'Shaughnessy and the party drove rapidly to the United States Embassy in an automobile.

At the conclusion of the conference at the embassy Mr. Lind went to the Hotel Turbido. Neither he nor O'Shaughnessy would discuss their talk, but it was rumored that arrangements would probably be made for Lind to meet General Huerta.

The special envoy would not say what he had come to the capital or what his instructions were. Both Lind and O'Shaughnessy refused to comment on the warlike move made by the Cabinet, but evidently regarded its action of the utmost importance in the present crisis.

In the minds of many, Mr. Lind's second Mexico City mission was connected with reports that have been current to the effect that President Wilson would send a stern, final note to Huerta demanding his abdication before the assembling of the Mexican Congress. At the same time many believe that if a final ultimatum came it would be presented through Mr. Lind as the special agent of President Wilson.

Because of the hostility of General Huerta toward any outside interference, especially on the part of the United States, members of the American colony feared that the presence of Mr. Lind in the city might hasten a rupture.

Sarcastic comments were made in the newspapers supporting the Huerta regime over the news that Mr. Lind was coming here. There was a note of antagonism in most of the comments. "It will all depend upon Washington when the storm is to break," these papers declare.

REPORT ATTEMPT TO ASSASSINATE HUERTA AS HE WAS DRIVING

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 7.—A special dispatch to the Chronicle today from Mexico City says an attempt was made yesterday afternoon to assassinate General Huerta while he was driving along Capistrico causeway.

A man ran into the street and grabbed the heads of the horses, at the same time drawing an automatic pistol from his pocket. One of the horses reared and his hoof struck the assailant in the face. He was carried to jail in a dying condition, the dispatch says.

DIAZ WOUNDS ARE SLIGHT; WILL LEAVE HOSPITAL IN 2 DAYS

HAVANA, Nov. 7.—Physicians who are attending General Felix Diaz for two knife stabs in the neck received last night at the hands of five Mexicans while attending a band concert, said today that the wounds were not serious. They decided that unless blood poisoning developed, Diaz would be able to leave the Emergency Hospital within forty-eight hours.

Diaz, who is technically under arrest, claims the attack was the result of plot to assassinate him. A charge of murderous assault was lodged this morning against General Guerrero Mendez, one of the five assailants who was shot in the abdomen and who is in a serious condition.

Officers of the Havana police force and the municipal guard attempted to extract a complete confession from Mendez, telling him that he might as well reveal all as the doctors believed he would die. The chief instance of the inquisitors was to learn the name of the other four assailants and whether or not Diaz' assassination had been ordered by General Huerta.

Harry Berliner, who was sitting beside Diaz when the attack was made, told the police that he had probably saved the general's life.

"I suddenly heard a woman scream," said Berliner, "and upon looking up I saw a man standing over Diaz raising his arm. Immediately the electric lights went out, but before the darkness I saw a knife gleam in the man's hands. I leaped forward, grabbing the man about the waist. He slashed twice before I tore him to earth. There was a flash and four more Mexicans were beating the air with their canes trying to strike Diaz over the head. In a few minutes they ran. A pistol flash from the earth as though one had fallen, and when the lights went on again I saw Mendez lying on the ground."

Berliner was placed under arrest as a result of the part he played in the fight.

After an investigation which lasted all night the chief of police declared his belief this morning that Diaz had been stabbed in a drunken brawl.

BERLIN HEARS THAT HUERTA WILL YIELD IF POWERS APPROVE

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—General Huerta will give up the reins of government in Mexico, according to the Mexican correspondent of the Frankfort Gazette. The correspondent wires that the provisional president will retire if the Powers support the action of the United States. By this move Huerta will avoid the appearance of yielding to American pressure alone. Huerta plans, the correspondent wires, to recall the Mexican minister from St. Petersburg to assume the provisional presidency.

BARTHOLDT ASKS PROOF AS TO TRUTH OF WILSON "DEMAND"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Representative Bartholdt of Missouri introduced a resolution in the House today, directing the foreign affairs committee to investigate newspaper reports of the sending of an ultimatum by the American government to Mexico. Bartholdt's resolute recites that inasmuch as Secretary of State Bryan declares the reports to be false the source of such news should be definitely determined.

CABINET SILENT ON CONFERENCE TODAY OVER HUERTA "DEFI"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The Mexican situation was discussed at length in the Cabinet meeting today. Comment on the preparations for war against the United States by General Huerta was refused at the White House, and all discussion of the Mexican situation was under a stern ban there owing, it is believed, to the desire of President Wilson that the true situation should be withheld from the public for the present.

Administration officials even disclaimed knowledge of the fact that Envoy Lind had departed from Vera Cruz for Mexico City, saying that they heard of it only through the newspapers.

It is now definitely understood that neither the War nor Navy Departments will be caught unprepared should the immediate need for intervention arise.

LLOYDS RAISES INSURANCE RATES IN MEXICAN CRISIS

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—An increase of 50 per cent. in the rate charged by the English Lloyds' insurance people on war risks has resulted from the increased gravity of the Mexican situation.

Rates which for a long time were from 1 to 2 per cent., are 1½ to 2½ per cent., according to Fred Chubb of Chubb & Son, agents for Lloyds and a score of other insurance companies.

Mr. Chubb said no risks were being taken on shipments of ammunition or firearms.

"The rate for cargoes," Mr. Chubb added, "also depends upon the point to which they are shipped. Rates are higher in the northern States of Mexico. Shipments destined for points on the seaboard carry a smaller premium than those to the interior."

IT'S EASY TO PAY THE SUMMERFIELD WAY

THE BRIDE of today is far more fortunate than those of former days. Think of the discomforts and even hardships of the young couple of a generation ago. Then when things could only be bought for cash the young husband could only afford to buy one article of furniture at a time, and it took years before they had a comfortable home. But now, it is entirely different. Through our modern credit system any wage earner can buy enough furniture to fully furnish every room. The total cost of furnishings is so small and the payments so easy, and in case of illness the extension is so free that the young couple will find only pleasure and happiness in the homes we furnish. Let us give you an estimate and show you how easy it is to obtain a comfortable home of your own.

'Japan Will Give Up Eills,' Says Hoar

Ellis's Lawyer Confident Extradition Papers Will Be Honored.

Japan has refused to extradite John Ellis, who abducted his own daughter and fled to Tokio. The child had been placed in the custody of his wife, after a sensational trial in the Massachusetts courts. The dispatch announcing Japan's action is discredited, however, by Roger Sherman Hoar, attorney for Mrs. Ellis.

"State Officer Frederick Flynn and an attorney are on their way to Tokio to bring Ellis back."

"In my opinion," said Mr. Hoar today, "the dispatch from Japan was written or inspired by Ellis himself, as he was business manager of the Japan Advertiser of Tokio at the time of his arrest. I think perhaps the Japanese authorities declined to turn Ellis over to the officers at once. That is customary in order that they may get further proof. Or it may be that there was some slight flaw in the requisition papers. Japan has never failed to grant a request by the United States for extradition and I believe it will not decline in this case."

Hub Artists to Hunt Typical American Girl

Is your sweetheart the "typical American girl"?

Or your wife?

Or your sister or daughter?

Somewhere there IS a typical American girl, and the AMERICAN is out to find her—if she is in New England. The AMERICAN believes she IS in New England. It believes that her features, her figure, her characteristics stamp her as typical. The AMERICAN believes she is —say—twenty years old—or somewhere between fifteen and thirty, anyway.

Three Boston artists have agreed to help us in the search for the typical American girl. Therefore, the "Typical Girl Editor" is anxious to get as many photographs as possible of New England girls.

Her Portrait in Oil.

When the photographs are all in, the three artists will examine them all, pick the one in their opinion most typically American in her beauty, and that girl will be painted in oils by one of the finest portrait artists in Boston.

Pictures will be received until further notice. Each Sunday, several will be printed in the AMERICAN.

It may be that you are very sure you know just what the "Typical American Girl" looks like, but that you have never seen her yourself. Many have written this to the editor. And the Typical Girl Editor will be glad to receive other letters of the same kind. The most enlightened will be submitted to the artist-judges for their guidance.

Harvard Graduate Writes.

The AMERICAN has printed several such letters from Boston artists. Here is one from a young Harvard man of two or three years back—he doesn't say what class—who is studying painting now in New York and plans to go to Paris shortly. He writes:

I'm going to say goodby to the typical American girls shortly—so just a last tribute before I go. (I'm sailing for Paris in a few months to keep up my painting.)

You know, if I were trying to find the girl you're looking for, I would go out to the Harvard-Yale game with my camera. It is there that you can see them—all of them. There are all kinds—brown hair and black hair and hair like yellow gold—brown eyes, and black eyes, and eyes like Summer sea—and surely the real, typical girl is there. I used to miss half the game when I was at Harvard, for looking about me at the girls. I think most of them keep hidden away in their homes—perhaps in cotton batting and under glass—for the rest of the year.

You will find the typical American girl in Boston—or New England—I know. I'm homesick for 'em. New York girls might be typical of the kind of Paris American expect to find. But Boston girls are the real American types—sensibly dressed—with a natural rose and no rouge on their cheeks—and their own blood coloring their lips. I wish you success. Yours, JOHN LIDDELL.

New England's Greatest Cash Store

CROWDS INSPECT NEW HOME FOR WHITE AUTOS

By J. C. KERRIGON.

Hundreds of owners of White automobiles attended the formal opening of the new sales and service building at 930 Commonwealth avenue. Today has been designated as "Owners Day" and the White patrons will be afforded every opportunity of inspecting the complete facilities afforded to care for their needs. Manager Hathaway has made elaborate preparations for their entertainment. The opening exercises will continue tomorrow when the general public are invited to inspect the new building.

The new White home is one of the finest and best equipped motor establishments to be found in New England, and it is a striking tribute to the popularity which White cars and trucks have attained during the thirteen years that White has maintained a factory branch office in Boston.

The building is ideal for a sales and service station. The show rooms are very spacious, and the scheme of decorations is in harmony with the bright, glistening new pleasure cars and trucks that are on exhibition. Complete lines of White cars and trucks are on exhibition during the opening, showing the latest body lines both in open and closed cars.

The service department is up to the minute in equipment. It is equipped with everything that is needed in the repair of automobiles. In fact a new model could almost be turned out at this station. The building is all on one floor and this adds to the efficiency as well as the economy of the plant.

Manager Hathaway today opened up the garage portion of the building so that visitors were able to drive cars in and leave them while inspecting the new building.

Realizing last year that its old Newbury street quarters were fast becoming inadequate to provide in the thorough White manner for the rapidly increasing family of owners in and around Boston, the White Company has spared no expense in making its establishment the most complete possible, from both sales and service standpoint.

"West Must Seek East," Says Faunce

"Put Selves in Place of Orient," Urges Brown Head.

"The West must seek the Orient. We must put ourselves in the place of the Oriental," declared President William H. P. Faunce of Brown University, who spoke at the Boston Baptist Social Union at Ford Hall. Dr. Faunce scored the methods of representatives of American commerce in the Orient. He said:

"In China red is the 'happy' color, white is the one signifying danger; it is the one of warning. Yet Americans make no allowance for this color preference. If purchasers ask for a cloth of more than the average width the American agent replies: 'Why, we don't make cloth as wide as that. Instead, we make it this width, which is the right one.'"

Dr. Eliot Lauds Women of War

"I am glad that the women are recognized in this lasting and patriotic memorial. It is the women who suffer most in war, despite the hardships which the men folk undergo during strife," declared Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, in his address at the dedication of the new 100-foot flagstaff in Cambridge. He added:

"The flagstaff is a memorial of the suffering and fortitude of the men and women of Cambridge in those trying years extending from 1775 to 1783."

RETURNS HOME AFTER A WEEK; MIND A BLANK

BRATTLEBORO, Nov. 7.—Arthur Kingsley was today still unable to recall what happened during his week's absence from home. With his mind a blank, unable to recognize his wife or to remember any of his experiences, Kingsley returned to his home in Whitingham as mysteriously as he disappeared.

How it came about that Kingsley returned to his own door is a puzzle to his wife and the physicians who examined him. Though there was nobody with him when she went to the door, she feels sure that in his condition he could not have returned alone. Some subconscious "knowing instinct" is believed to have led him back.

Kingsley was evidently not suffering from exposure, and had no marks on his body, except a scratch on the back of his neck.

PARIS, Nov. 7.—The French Chamber of Deputies urges the decoration of the Legion of Honor for the organizers of the conference when the members of the American commission on agricultural organization visited France to study.

TWO WOMEN IN QUINCY AUTO CRASH

The crash on Eaton's Hill, Quincy, between a touring car owned by James Myers of Braintree and a smaller car owned and driven by M. F. Sadler of No. 245 Washington street, Dorchester, resulted in Sadler and two young women in his car being thrown out. Mr. Sadler was cut on his head and face. None in the other car was injured.

The street where the cars crashed is torn up for laying water pipes, leaving a passage only wide enough for two vehicles to pass. It is believed that the driver of one of the cars, which were moving in opposite directions, was blinded by the headlights of the other and misjudged his distance.

One of the front wheels was knocked off the light car and the other had a spring and the steering gear broken. Neither Mr. Sadler nor the people riding with him would give the names of the young women, who, he said, were relatives of his family.

HYOMEI SOOTHES, PURIFIES, HEALS CATARRH ILLS

When you have frequent sneezing fits, tickling in the throat, crusts in the nose, spasms of coughing, raising of mucus, droppings in the throat and offensive breath, you are afflicted with catarrh. Immediate steps should be taken to remedy this condition or the ailment will increase and spread through the air passages, and a chronic and serious stage of the disease may result.

At the first symptoms of catarrh, use Hyomei as sold by druggists everywhere. There is no other treatment like it, or just as good; none that can take its place and relieve so surely, so quickly and at so little cost. It is a scientific medicated air treatment, that does not drug and derange the stomach, but is breathed in through the Hyomei inhaler, destroying the disease germs that may lurk in the nose, throat and lungs, and soothing and healing the irritated mucous membrane.

Hyomei is offered to catarrhal sufferers with the agreement to refund the purchase price to any one who is not satisfied with results. You certainly can afford to test Hyomei with an offer like this. Get it now, and be cured of catarrh. Hyomei does not contain cocaine, or any other habit-forming drug. Complete outfit, including inhaler and bottle of liquid, $1.00. Extra bottles of liquid, if later needed, 50c.

CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers, who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

BACHE DECISION TO GOVERN MAY VAN ALEN CASE?

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Friends of Mrs. May Van Alen Thompson, wife of Grinwold Thompson, who has appealed to the courts from the customs decision to impose a heavy duty on the twenty-five trunks full of clothing she brought into this country when she landed at Boston recently, are wondering what effect the decision of the court on Mrs. Jules S. Bache's appeal will have on Mrs. Thompson's case.

The facts in the cases of both women apparently are identical. Mrs. Bache lived in Paris. Mrs. Thompson lived in England. Mr. Bache was a New York banker. Mr. Thompson is a New York banker. Mrs. Bache claimed her legal residence was abroad. So does Mrs. Thompson. But the courts say Mrs. Bache's legal residence is the same as her husband's—New York. What then, will they say to Mrs. Thompson?

When Mrs. Bache arrived in New York, December 5, 1911, her personal baggage was assessed under the customs law which exists to encourage residence of the United States. Mrs. Bache died a protest.

Federal Judge Hay, denying her contention, ruled that as Bache lived in New York and the banker and his wife were on amicable terms, her legal residence was with him.

Before her marriage Mrs. Bache was Florence R. Sheffel, daughter of Adolph Sheffel, a retired merchant and capitalist.

Mrs. Thompson landed from the Arabic in Boston. She is a cousin of Vincent Astor, and a society leader.

MRS. JULES S. BACHE, who lost appeal from United States customs decision, in a case similar to that of Mrs. May Van Alen Thompson.

Gloucester Ice Ship Burns in Harbor

Alcona's Crew of Fourteen Rescued With Difficulty.

CURLING, N. F., Nov. 7.—The $100,000 steamer Alcona, a floating refrigerator for the Gloucester boats engaged in the herring fisheries on this coast, sank in Curling harbor, after it had been swept by flames for eighteen hours.

The Alcona's crew of fourteen men had a narrow escape. They were today congratulated on their heroism in sticking by their craft, fighting the fire all through the night, although a gale fanned the blaze to great intensity.

Ouch! Pain, Pain, Rub Rheumatism

Rub Pain Right Out With Small Trial Bottle of Old "St. Jacobs Oil"

Rheumatism is "pain only." Not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Stop drugging! Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" directly upon the "tender spot," and relief comes instantly. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism cure which never disappoints and cannot burn or discolor the skin.

Limber up! Quit complaining! Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Oil," from any drug store, and in just a moment you'll be free from rheumatic pain, soreness, stiffness and swelling. Don't suffer! Relief and a cure awaits you. "St. Jacobs Oil" has cured millions of rheumatism sufferers in the last half century, and is just as good for sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, backache and sprains.

ASKS PUBLIC BE TOLD OF PLAGUE CAMP CHARGES

Public hearings on conditions at the State Prison Camp and Tubercular Hospital in Rutland will be demanded by Representative Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester, when he appears before the Massachusetts Prison Commission on Monday to outline charges he makes.

His charges are based on a visit paid the camp on October 1, with Representative Benjamin F. Sullivan, a brother.

The Sullivans charge that invalid consumptive prisoners are placed in solitary confinement and given bread and water diet; that healthy prisoners, for breaches of discipline, are sent to the same solitary confinement cells and thus are exposed to the disease of former occupants; that Superintendent George Erskine is incompetent and cruel.

"Some of the prisoners told me the dogs and horses are treated better than they are at the camp," said Lewis R. Sullivan. "No consumptive patient should be placed on a bread and water diet. I do not mean that there should be no punishment. Certain privileges could be taken away from them instead."

MANSFIELD JUSTIFIES HIS JILTING GIRL

In an answer filed to the $50,000 breach of promise suit against him, Harry K. Mansfield, proprietor of the Ferncroft Inn, today says if evidence is introduced by Miss Elizabeth M. Ryan tending to show that there was a promise made to marry her he was justified in not keeping the promise.

He denies he ever gave his promise to wed the New Haven girl, and further than that he wants her to present a copy of their agreement to marry.

Several interrogatories were also filed by him in the Suffolk Superior Court, and in one of them he asks Miss Ryan whether she alleged marriage promise was expressed or implied.

In the answer Mansfield claims that he not only did not promise to marry Miss Ryan but that he never re-affirmed the promise as she alleges.

A denial is made by Mansfield that he made any attempts to draw funds from two banks in which he had deposits in order to avoid attachments. He says that he never had funds in either bank.

Pavlowa Admits She Paid $5,000 Forfeit

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Anna Pavlowa, the Russian dancer, was a witness in City Court yesterday in a proceeding by Dorothy E. Aldman to collect a debtor's judgment from the enterprises of Max Rabinoff.

Miss Pavlowa asked if she did not agree to pay Rabinoff $5,000 forfeit if she broke a contract to come to the United States, said she had paid the $5,000 to Rabinoff's brother-in-law. She said she did not intend to defeat the claim of any creditor.

NAVY YARD READY TO BUILD A BATTLESHIP

There is under way a determined movement to secure for the Charlestown Navy Yard the work of building one of our next big battleships, following the AMERICAN'S editorial suggestion to that effect.

The movement is backed by leaders in Boston's life. The officers at the navy yard are emphatically in favor of it, and Mayor Fitzgerald quotes Secretary of the Navy Daniels as protecting big improvements at the yard and more work for the men here in the future.

The movement to bring the battleship building to Boston has already assumed such proportions that it is certain the matter will be brought before President Wilson and Secretary Daniels.

The project has these points to commend it:

1—Foreign industry would benefit.

2—The navy development would receive a boost.

3—Boston machinery and men at the yard would be employed.

4—A tremendous saving would be effected by eliminating private profit from the work.

5—The competition of a navy yard with private builders would force those private builders to lower prices.

Favored by Commandant.

Commandant DeWitt Coffman of the navy yard is strongly for the project. He says:

"I would prefer an expression favorable to such an undertaking to come from a higher source. But I am not averse to indorsing such a plan. It would fill a wish I have had since my appointment as commandant.

"The building of a battleship here would mean much to Massachusetts and Boston. The yard is large enough for such an undertaking. The facilities are ample. Men are available. I'm from Virginia, but I want to see Massachusetts forge to the front.

"Let me say that the building of a battleship here would mean much in the way of saving money for the United States Government. It would force private shipbuilding concerns to reduce their bids.

"We have several splendid drydocks here. And we have considerable room in the yard shops. We are, indeed, well equipped to build a battleship."

Ample Room for Work.

Captain J. W. Oman, in charge of the yard work, said:

"I agree with Commandant Coffman when he says a battleship ought to be built here. There is ample room for such work. It would mean much to Charlestown. The business would be given to many hands. The yard is well fitted for the job."

Mayor Fitzgerald said:

"I recall a chat I had with Secretary of the Navy Daniels at the Charlestown Navy Yard a few months ago, when he told me that Boston had every advantage for the construction of warships; that it had the plant, skilled labor and experienced men.

"At that time Secretary Daniels said he intended to have a quarter of a million dollars expended at once for provided for improved machinery and greater facilities for ship construction at Charlestown. It is the secretary's idea to have a permanent force of men at the Charlestown yard and to utilize the yard as speedily as possible for the construction of colliers and tenders.

"We can go even beyond that when the new equipment is provided for the yard and at no distant day we can have battleships built there."

Joseph A. Conry, former Congressman and director of the port of Boston, said, speaking for the Port Directors:

"If the local navy yard has the facilities to build a battleship, let's build one. If not, a cruiser, and if not a cruiser then a gunboat. At any rate, let us do some construction work.

CASSIDY TELLS WOMEN HOW NATION AIDS

Mr. Cassidy tells the housewives today the aid the Department of Agriculture offers them through bulletins having to do especially with women's work. Early application should be made for these bulletins and only those particularly applying to each woman's special work ought to be asked for.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The Department of Agriculture has recently issued a list of free publications which apply particularly to women's work.

This list is free on application to the Editor and Chief of the Division of Publications, Washington, D. C. The bulletins may be applied for at the same source.

There are more than one hundred special classes treated in the bulletins. Sometimes there are as many as a dozen pamphlets for a subject. One class of bulletins deals with dairying. Others specially concern butter, cheese, cream and milk. Among the bulletins dealing with milk are the following:

The care of milk and its use in the home.

Rogy milk and cream.

Bitter milk.

Clean milk.

Milk and supply of cities.

The covered milk pail.

Cost of market milk.

Bulletins on drugs are entitled "Harmfulness of headache mixtures," "Habit-forming agents; their indiscriminate sale and use a menace to the public welfare."

Every woman who keeps a few hens in the backyard and tries to overcome the exorbitant price eggs are selling for today, will be interested in the bulletins on poultry.

These bulletins treat of poultry accounting, poultry diseases and pests, ducks and geese, eggs, poultry feeding, poultry marketing and how to raise squabs and turkeys.

What will most interest the housewife, though, are the hints on how to prepare foods, such as apples, banana flour, bread, cereal, breakfast foods, clams, coffee substitutes and corn.

There are twelve bulletins devoted to canning and preserving. The fireless cooker is the subject of a special bulletin.

Fruits and flowers receive their merited attention. Many of the more common fruits are told of so that every housewife is aided to know how to buy the best fruits.

Women who want to know about helpful organizations for boys and girls, such as the poultry, canning and corn raising clubs, may learn all about them by sending for the list of pamphlets included under the heading, "Agricultural Clubs."

Trees, school gardens, roads, palms and white washes, and water are samples of the wide range of subjects which these bulletins cover and which will be sent on application.

Every woman is entitled to these bulletins as long as the supply lasts. In applying first send for the list. Then indicate from this the name of the series and serial number of the bulletins or circulars desired.

A $2.40 VALUE FOR 95 CENTS, BUT HURRY!

If on your way home this evening, some stranger offered you $2.40 in the return for 95 cents, you wouldn't hesitate long in accepting the offer, would you?

Not much! You'd grab at the chance so quickly it would make friend stranger's head swim.

But don't worry, it won't happen—at least not in just that precise manner. What will happen, however, is this: you will read of a genuine bona fide "$2.40 value for 95 cents offer" and you will HUSTLE to take advantage of it (if you are wise).

And it won't be offered by a stranger either, but by this newspaper and backed up by this newspaper's absolute guarantee.

Here it is. Get busy before it's "too late."

Read this and act quickly. For a short time only the Boston AMERICAN offers its readers an extraordinary chance to get a collection of genuine wool felt college pennants at 10 cents each or three for 25 cents, OR A SET OF 12 FOR 95 cents.

Size of each pennant is 36 by 15 inches, exclusive designs with letters embossed on wool felt—not the cheap, shoddy, printed cotton kind, regularly sold by fakirs at 10 cents. THERE IS NO COMPARISON. MORE THAN HALF A MILLION of these same pennants have already been distributed by the AMERICAN. They satisfied every purchaser. You will pay 30 cents, 75 cents or $1.00 at the football games this Fall for a pennant NOT as good as these.

By using these assorted subjects, perfectly delightful decorative effects can be obtained in your den, library, or, in fact, any room in the house. Tablecloths, pillow covers, etc., are only a few of the countless decorating possibilities. So act quickly!

Here are the subjects. Take your choice, but hurry!

Cornell (red and white).
Holy Cross (violet and white).
Massachusetts (blue and white).
Pennsylvania (blue and red).
Boston College (maroon and gold).
Paul Revere (buff and blue).
Wellesley (blue and white).
Red Sox (red and white).
Columbia (light blue and white).
Army (black, yellow and gray).
Navy (dark blue and yellow).
U. S. A. (dark blue and yellow).

$2,500 Fund Began with $20 Gold Piece

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 7.—President John Grier Hibben of Princeton University stated that a scholarship fund of $2,500, under the will of John Reid Christie of the Class of 1913, who died on October 15, 1913, in France, started from a $20 gold piece.

Runaway Girl in Woods Three Days

SOUTH NORWALK, Ct., Nov. 7.—When reprimanded by her mother, Mrs. W. T. Arnold of Rowayton, for not attending school last Monday, Miss Marion Arnold, fourteen, ran out of the house, saying she would do as Dorothy Arnold did, and disappeared.

Yesterday she was found by searchers in the woods, half frozen and nearly starved. She had eaten only nuts and an apple or two during her three days of wild life.

MAYOR ALMOST READY TO ENTER THE FIGHT

Mayor Fitzgerald may be a candidate for re-election. He is being overwhelmed with requests to enter the fight. Many of the requests are in the form of letters and telegrams. He announced this fact today to the City Hall newspaper men.

"I think I owe it as a duty to again enter the lists," he smilingly said. "I did not intend to do so, but last night's meeting of the Municipal League may make the step imperative. But just now I cannot decide."

The political sharps are certain the Mayor will run. They declare his hat will be thrown into the ring when his nomination papers now in circulation are signed and ready for delivery to the Election Commissioners.

Curley Already in Fight.

Whether Mayor Fitzgerald decides to be a candidate or not, Congressman James M. Curley, head of the Ward 17 Tammany Club, is entering actively and aggressively into the mayoralty fight. He says, however, that he will withdraw if Mayor Fitzgerald consents to run.

Congressman Curley says: "I desire to make this announcement now. If Hon. John F. Fitzgerald is a candidate for re-election, I will not be. I am not going to be fooled, however, and my papers are going to be ready to put in. I have full assurance that the Mayor is not going to be a candidate, but in case he changes his mind, and stranger things have happened, and he decides to be a candidate, I will withdraw my papers. If Mayor Fitzgerald is not a candidate, I am in the field until the finish."

Bangs Also in Field.

Added interest was given to the Mayoralty fight today when nomination papers were taken out on behalf of the Republican City Committee for former Alderman Francis R. Bangs of Ward 11 by President Herman Hormel of that organization. The latter took this course following a vote of the executive committee and will begin at once to secure the necessary 5,000 names for a nomination so as to place Bangs' name upon the ballot.

The Republican organization through its executive committee has also decided to place in the field for the City Council three candidates. A school committee will also be nominated. Courtenay Guild, David P. Montague, Walter V. Fletcher, Shirley T. Graves and Herman Hormel were named as a nominating committee to bring in the names of the council and school committee candidates.

INDIGESTION, GAS DYSPEPSIA GONE

"Pape's Diapepsin" fixes sick, sour, gassy stomachs in five minutes.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated, and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember, the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

Husband Denies Charges of Wife

Mrs. Florence A. Reed of Waverly, who is fighting her husband, Samuel Victor Reed, an accountant, for the possession of their four-year-old daughter, testified in the Cambridge Court that Red not only mistreated her, but threatened to kill the child, who is now in her custody. Judge Keating reserved his decision.

Mr. Reed denies his wife's charges. He says: "In fairness, I wish to state that the charges made by Mrs. Florence A. Reed were denied by me on the witness stand as being absolutely an unqualifiedly false."

Walsh Congratulated by John E. Redmond

The following cablegram was received today from John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Parliamentary party:

United Irish League Office, Boston:

Pray convey to David I. Walsh, staunch friend Irish cause, my heartfelt congratulations on his election Governor of Massachusetts.

JOHN REDMOND.

Lunn Won't Honor Political Opponent

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 7.—The Rev. George Lunn, formerly pastor of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, of Brooklyn, defeated Socialist candidate for re-election as Mayor of Schenectady, has pointedly declined to congratulate Mayor-elect Schoolcraft.

Attorney Would Jail Those Who Smoke in Public

"Jail for smokers" is the threat of Attorney Fremont L. Pugsley, and this is a part of the bill which he proposes to introduce during the next session of the Legislature.

"The smoking of tobacco or of any other substance in pipes, cigars, cigarettes or in any other unnecessary manner or form is at all times prohibited in all places used for public purposes.

"Any person * * * * violating any of the foregoing sections shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than seven days nor more than fourteen days and shall pay the costs of his or her conviction."

MRS. WALKER FEARED THREAT OF MADHOUSE

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 7.—Mrs. Nina Chinn Walker, who is suing her husband, Lieutenant J. W. G. Walker, for separate support, testified today in her own behalf, denying that she made a proposition to give away two of her children and also accusing her husband of threatening to put her in an insane asylum.

Mrs. Walker in cross-examination said: "I left my husband on October 19, 1909. On October 16 I signed the separation libel which charged misbehavior and cruelty. I did this after Lieutenant Walker had brought to me a letter from his sister, Mrs. John Thomas, of Boston, which said that the children were to be divided up between Mrs. Thomas and his other sister, Mrs. Susan W. Fitzgerald, and his mother, Mrs. Admiral Walker.

"I said to Lieutenant Walker, 'I cannot consider any such proposition.'

"Lieutenant Walker then said if I refused to comply with such a plan he would have me put in an insane asylum, 'where I belonged.'"

Mrs. Walker testified that she was afraid that her husband would put her in an insane asylum.

ENGLAND READY TO COMPROMISE ON SUFFRAGE

LONDON, Nov. 7.—Efforts are being made to induce the British government to come to an agreement with the suffragists on the basis of a measure for the enfranchisement of women through means of a section of the official program of the dominant Liberal party.

Some of the suffragist leaders admit this movement has obtained considerable headway. A significant feature of the conferences which have been held is the presence at them of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick William Pethick-Lawrence, who left the fold of the Women's Social and Political Union, the militant organization, at the request of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, and who took with them their paper, Votes for Women.

It is known that the government will consider only a compromise based on an unqualified repudiation of the Women's Social and Political Union and all of its militant methods.

The constitutional suffragists have finally become convinced that opposition of the militants is the only hope of securing the parliamentary suffrage for women, which is the only form of political activity denied to them in the British Isles, where they possess the municipal suffrage and may hold every civic office outside of Parliament.

New Tariff Great Boom for Canada

Farmers, Fishermen and Lumbermen to Benefit.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Nov. 7.—It is generally conceded that the recent great reduction in the United States tariff will be of much benefit to the farmers, lumbermen, fishermen, and lime manufacturers of the Maritime Provinces.

The price of potatoes in the rural districts of this province jumped in less than a week from 75 cents to $1.20 a barrel, and twenty-five carloads were shipped to New York immediately after the new tariff went into effect.

Teacher Falls Down Stairs in Darkness

Miss Beatrice H. Rothwell of No. 29 Remington street, Quincy, a teacher in the new Adams School, Quincy, is at her home in a critical condition as a result of a fall down a flight of stairs in that building last night. The electric lights had not been installed and the building was in darkness.

PLAN TO SETTLE NEW HAVEN BOND ROW IS DENIED

Before Judge Sheldon in the Massachusetts Supreme Court today, counsel for the New Haven and the Bulkeley interests in the litigation over the proposed $67,000,000 bond financing by the road, announced that no settlement of the suit outside of court is contemplated.

Attorney Nathan Matthews of counsel for Ex-Governor Morgan G. Bulkeley with the consent of Attorney Choate for the road, secured the setting at the head of the list next Tuesday morning of the hearing in the Bulkeley motion for a preliminary restraining order against the pending financing, and Judge Sheldon set at the head of the list Monday, November 17, a hearing on merits of the appeal of the Massachusetts Public Service Commission.

At $16, $20, $25 $30 and $35

every Filene suit is made just as carefully and painstakingly where you CAN'T see the stitches as where they SHOW.

VARIETY, too, IS TO BE CONSIDERED: the fact that here is a range that runs all the way from plain blues to fancy heather mixtures, from a family of grays to checks and plaids, from plain worsteds to imported Scotch cheviots.

PATCH POCKETS, soft rolls, vests with or without lapels, unpadded shoulders;—every style "kink" you want.

And speaking of VALUES, Filene Suits at $25 have been greatly reinforced by our efforts to give unusual suits at this price.

New HEAVY COATS from Robinson & Cleaver, London Then, of course, hundreds of sturdy American made coats. Chinchilla coats, zibelines, velour finishes, double faces, Scotch tweeds and English mixtures.

SHAWL collars are big feature, slightly shaped coats a strong feature, square patch pockets a novelty, and the Glenquoich model in the heavy coats a favorite.

$20 to $65, with London coats even at $30 and plenty of REGENT TOPCOATS at $25

DRAMATIC LOVE ROMANCE OF HARRY K. AND EVELYN NESBIT THAW

CHAPTER LXV.

"Such duty as the subject owes the prince, Even such a woman oweth to her husband."
—"The Taming of the Shrew."

The cooler weather of October found Evelyn sadly in need of rest and invigoration. For four months she had been incessantly occupied in her waking hours with some feature of Harry's case. There was the daily visit of Harry. This alone meant the greater part of a morning or an afternoon, on account of the long ride downtown, the inevitable delays, the talk with Harry and the long ride back up town to the Lorraine.

Then Evelyn made many visits to the offices of the lawyers, first to Judge Olcott's and later to Hartridge's.

Some of these conferences with attorneys were bitter, bitter trials to Evelyn. There were hours when the girl quivered with mental agony, as she laid bare her life, in order that the defence might be strengthened.

There were conferences, also, with Harry's mother and any other relatives who might happen to be in New York from time to time. Evelyn did not come in contact, so far as was known, with any of her own people. Her mother, Mrs. Charles J. Holman of Pittsburgh, remained in seclusion. Mrs. Holman came forth only once or twice, and then to deny statements made or interviews attributed to her.

Still Loyal to Harry.

The more physical burden of the Summer heat was severe, even though Evelyn was having all the comforts necessary to make life in the broiling city endurable. But restriction to the city was a real hardship, from the standpoint of suy body in easy circumstances.

Harry's mother, utterly unable to remain in the city through the worst of the heat, was forced to recuperate in the Adirondacks for a fortnight, but Evelyn remained in town and kept up her daily calls on Harry.

The girl also declared that she was being misquoted in the newspapers, that people were misrepresenting her and that she had not said half the things attributed to her.

Toward the latter part of October, a few days after Jerome made his notable remarks about a possible accomplice for Harry, Evelyn was quoted at length as protesting against reckless and exaggerated statements being placed in her mouth. The interview ran thus:

Now, remember, I will not discuss any phase of Harry's case, and Mr. Hartridge must approve of anything I may say. It is not that I would like to say many things, but you know the double construction that can be placed on almost every sentence. I might say something that the prosecution might interpret just the opposite of what I really meant. It is these things that I have to guard against.

I am truly thankful that I have kept my health. It is true that, for several days, I could scarcely eat anything—none of us could for that matter—and several times I thought that I would break down.

But now that I am assured of Harry's position and convinced of the favorable outcome of his trial, I do not worry any more and my health is as good, if not better, than it has been for a long time.

Asks for Fair Play.

Do you know, I certainly cannot understand how so many falsehoods could be manufactured. I have reached a stage where I do not pay any attention to them. I often wondered what either Harry or myself ever did that we should be treated so unfairly.

Some persons have even gone so far as to accuse me of having a press agent—that's another falsification. I have never known but three persons connected with a newspaper in my life.

Almost every day I read in the paper of some man or woman alleging that they know Harry and myself intimately—that they have valuable information, of vital importance to this case. Not one of these persons did either of us ever meet or even hear of before. That is one of the many annoyances I have and to bear without being able to contradict them.

A story was sent out from Pittsburgh several weeks ago, giving an account of an arrest in which Harry was said to have figured under an assumed name and that the case was later hushed up in court. No such thing ever happened. Both Harry and I were in New York at the time.

Harry, his family and I are all on the best of terms. There has never been the slightest friction between us. We understand each other and move in perfect accord. Any stories of misunderstandings or disagreements are all dreams, pure and simple.

October passed. The twenty-fifth of that month marked the fourth month since the shooting. November came in and in the first week of that month, announcement was made that Harry K. Thaw's murder trial was No. 2 on the revised list of homicide cases then awaiting trial in the Tombs and that the case might be called almost any time.

Preparing for Trial.

On October 1 there were thirty-one murder cases in the Tombs, of which nearly a score were ahead of Thaw. This was cited by Jerome to explain why Thaw could not be brought to trial before.

By November so many cases had been tried that only one murder defendant was ahead of Thaw. One, Raffael Gascome, charged with murder, ranked ahead of Harry, but his case was listed for the next week, so the General Sessions Court would be clear for Harry ere long.

On the thirteenth of November Jerome announced that Thaw's trial would be moved for the first week in December. He was asked what judge would probably hear the evidence. Jerome said that this had not been decided, but that Recorder Goff might be the trial judge.

Jerome said that he would conduct the prosecution himself and that Garvan would assist him. It had been understood for several weeks that Jerome would handle the State's case in person, but his definite statement of it lent extra interest.

Matters were shaping toward the crisis. Everyone was asking just what line will the defence follow? Roger O'Mara, the Pittsburgh detective who was close to Thaw, was quoted in a dispatch from the Smoky City as saying:

Thaw will stand on the plea of justification when arraigned in the New York courts, and his attorneys will make no attempt to prove him to have been insane when he shot and killed the New York architect in Madison Square Garden.

* * *

Just as Jerome announced officially that he would head the prosecution announcement was made from the Thaw side of the lawyer who had been decided upon to lead the defence at the trial. His name was Delphin Michael Delmas of San Francisco.

OUST JUDGE IN THAW CASE

Hasbrouck's Defeat in Dutchess County Attributed to Thaw Sympathizers.

source. It will be recalled that it was in Castleton Harry Thaw received his earliest support, and it was there that W. J. Fallon was attacked.

It is well known that the Castleton residents, or a portion of them at least, took the attempted extradition as an insult to them and to many of those who followed Harry Thaw's trail when he was installed in the Canadian line cars in Montreal.

It is the opinion of those made the letters would assist Thaw at the present time, as it was exposed.

Shortly after arrival in Montreal Thaw's affairs on Live Novelt Thaw have been in the custody of an escort, but it was not until last night that affairs assumed their present normal aspect and the entrance in of the theatre has been in its full swing ever since to protect the former Pittsburgh girl from personal injury during her engagement here.

Several Warnings Mailed.

The first communication the manager received that there received threatening letters of Mrs. Thaw came in the form of a letter sent by Manager Wright of the theatre before the opening of the opening performance. Half a dozen threatening letters had been received by special delivery at the box office and as many more addressed to Mrs. Thaw and mailed personal had been received by Mrs. Thaw herself.

The first letter received by Manager Wright read as follows:

If you dare to allow this woman to perform in your theatre at an other performance before the honest women and girls of this city I shall take means to prevent it by fair means or foul. I think knowing you as I do, that you want no trouble, and that you will not let that woman, who has used the means of procuring an honored of home in the United States, and let her exile back to the country from whence she came and live on this way Canada will be through with the Thaws once and for all.

A MOTHER.

FELKER QUESTIONS ATTORNEY-GENERAL ON THAW EXTRADITION

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 7.—Governor Felker, who has prompted his decision in the Thaw case Saturday, declared today before making my finding, I shall consult with Attorney General James P. Tuttle of Manchester.

"The Council has a meeting today at which we shall discuss the question of a statute of the late President Franklin Pierce of New Hampshire as soon as this meeting is over, I will take up the Thaw extradition proceedings with Attorney General Tuttle."

The Thaw supporters were inclined to rejoice over the announcement. W. F. Jerome demanded that the requisition papers be framed in his face today, but the Thaw lawyers point out that Governor Felker's latest action indicates he does not intend to overrule the decision of Mr. Nevins, at least in this particular.

Third Jerome Request.

A new requisition paper was filed by Jerome Corsan Attorney Bernard Jacobs, his New Hampshire representative, just before midnight.

This is the third requisition request filed by Jerome.

The first made on the strength of an alleged indictment warrant, called for Thaw's return to Dutchess County. The second, worded somewhat differently made the same demand, but the third asks for the return of the prisoner to New York county, where the "true bill," charging Thaw with conspiracy was found after Jerome had appeared. It is claimed, as a witness before the grand jurors.

Owing to the fact that yesterday was the last day for the filing of papers in the Thaw case, if Jerome or Thaw's limit already having expired. Secretary of State Edward N. Pearson kept his office open until a late hour to give Jerome a chance to file any papers.

The new requisition reached Attorney Jacobs by a late messenger, and was at once rushed to the Secretary of State.

Thaw's supporters are of the opinion that Jerome requests Thaw be sent to New York County, instead of Dutchess County, because of the changed situation in the Tuxedo shire.

Judge Frank Hasbrouck, who presided over the Dutchess County Grand Jury, now which so much discussion has arisen, has been for six years re-elected annually. At the Tuesday elections, however, his opponents made Hasbrouck's alleged friendliness for Jerome against Thaw an issue, and the Judge was defeated for re-election.

Sentiment Favors Thaw.

Jerome, it is claimed, now believes the sentiment in Dutchess County is against him, and that he could deal better with Thaw in New York County.

The Thaw supporters point out that a new precedent has been established by Jerome in filing three requisition requests for the same prisoner within two weeks.

Another theory advanced to account for the new requisition is that in the final Thaw brief Judge Chase of New Hampshire pointed out a glaring defect in Jerome's previous procedure which assured Thaw's freedom unless a new requisition was asked.

In a statement today, Thaw set forth: "There were many homicide cases while Mr. Jerome was District Attorney in New York County. The majority of the accused were liberated because neither he nor his assistants troubled themselves sufficiently to secure a conviction.

"Practically all of the remainder were sentenced from two to seven years.

"Jerome says a great deal about the Thaw money preventing justice. As a matter of fact he knows that, if my case had not been given such publicity—as if I had been a poor laborer, a resident of Pennsylvania and acquitted under practically the same conditions I should have been freed at once.

"Or, if I had been committed to Matteawan, the State of New York would have deported me long before the New York law requires.

"It was the publicity that the case attained that kept me confined, as well as partly to satisfy the pride of Mr. Jerome and his friends.

"This attempt to get me is insincere in more ways than one.

"Why did Jerome and his friends rest quietly two years ago when Elmer Brown escaped from Matteawan? Brown was charged with murder in the first degree for killing a poor old woman. Before he was put upon trial he was confined there as insane. He escaped from Matteawan and evading a reward was offered for his return.

"Here was a man charged with serious crime, yet no State official pursued him, nor did any private parties move a hand. There was no pursuit and no reward except the usual $50. Brown has been free ever since.

"Richard Prusser was sent to Matteawan under exactly the same circumstances as I. He had been acquitted of homicide on grounds of insanity. In all respects we were alike.

"From a legal point of view there is no reason why I should be confined there. The most I was and was not in the same category as Brown.

"Prusser, as I and many others know, he considered as Fallon's case that the present pursuit is contrary to all precedent. The only excuse for interfering a change of administration in my case.

"It is deplorable that anyone should attempt by a subterfuge to accomplish what cannot be done under the laws of civilized

THAW ASKS GRANGE TO HELP FREE NEW YORK WIFE SLAYER

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 7. Harry K. Thaw who is confident, has appealed to the officers of the National Grange, which opens its annual convention here Tuesday, to aid their good offices to free from imprisonment in the Matteawan asylum a wife slayer whom Thaw considers is sane and who will be liberated.

The name of the man is Clarke and he is said to be a relative of one of the prominent officials of the New York Grange, who will be here tomorrow to attend the convention.

Discussing the matter, Thaw said:

"I am not the only one to be illegally detained at Matteawan. There is a wealthy New Yorker incarcerated there who is as sane as any person in the land. I fear that he must remain there because of the stir caused by my escape. However, I believe that a trial should be made to get him out of that place. I have met the man and he impressed me as being normal in every particular. The National Grange should aid him for reasons that will be shown during its convention in Manchester."

[illegible]

Sept. 30th, 1913.
Gentlemen: I have suffered from Asthma for about 20 years. My family physician, at last, made a personal investigation into the merits of Kenyon's Asthma Cure. He found it to be all you claim for it. After discussing with him for some months I decided to give it a trial. I found it to be just the same as the first bottle I got. I am getting very much the same story. After suffering for some months I feel I am relieved, and I decided to write you. At that time my throat was in such a bad condition that I could not talk and was in a very [illegible] condition. I am glad to say that, after I had taken two bottles of the medicine, I found a decided change and now after two months' use of it I am [illegible] and have not had a trouble since. At the time I had it I weighed 117 lbs. I am now back to my normal weight, 135. I am now back to my normal weight, 135. I am now back to my normal weight, 135.

TOO MANY CHILDREN
are pale and frail—backward in studies—with pinched faces and poor blood—their minds and bodies are actually starved because their regular food does not nourish.

Such children need Scott's Emulsion above everything else; it contains nature's rarest life-giving fats; it is essentially food value—blood-food and bone-food, free from wine, alcohol or harmful drug.

Scott's Emulsion often builds many times its weight in solid flesh—its medicinal, tonic and nutritive properties make all good food do good.

Crimson Squad Off for Princeton Today

Two Special Trains to Convey Team to New York Where the "Night Before" Will Be Spent

By SYDE LYNES.

THE Harvard eleven is off for New York and there it is to Jungleton for the big game at Princeton tomorrow, and the most important part of the student body carries with it any germs of victory that a crimson eleven may be saturated with germs of stuff, for what I did see about the university wall mass tracks for the Jersey town some time today or tonight, but I conclude will not be seen like he devoted village.

The departure had been arranged for at the gathering of two cars on the Rindge & Lathrop Limited and the members of the squad together with coaches, doctors, trainers, rubbers, masseurs and all others who take part in the gay rest of a big college football team were to be piled into two cars, headed for the Hotel McAlpin in New York, where the team every being to spend today, tomorrow, and each tomorrow morning leaves for Princeton at the 10:30 train over the Pennsylvania.

STUDENT'S CHEER TEAM.

A BIG mass meeting in the Union last night at which the principal speaker was President Lowell of Harvard, showed the team that the whole student body of Harvard was behind them in their invasion of the Tigers' lair, where they are going like never yet was a game, and a couple of thousand students left with a broad startled the assembled during the small hours of the morning in Harvard Square, cheered the team when it left the square.

With the exception of financial, there will be no student body

row, and Captain Storer, whose leg bruise is still painful if not serious, all the regulars and first subs were on the list in addition for the big struggle to-morrow, even to Eddie Mahon who made a big showing last and is looked to in the ordinary to a series of brilliant dashes and one pretty placement goal in the first day's scrimmage.

TO PRACTICE IN HOTEL ROOM.

THERE will be nothing more doing in the way of practice for the eleven today, except the most elaborate trying to be conservative about it, on a five hour ride and free from worry recently aboard a New Haven train. This evening, however, after the young gridiron football warriors from Harvard have had their fill of New York food, and successfully dodged all kinds of inquisitive onlookers who want to have a look at the Harvards, and after food has properly digested, one of the dining rooms of the McAlpin will be the scene of a signal drill during which guests of the hotel will probably think Jack Johnson, the black-smith, Vulcan in the manufacture of thunderbolts, Brewster and all for the good of the Harvard football cause, so more New Yorkers should have any kick coming.

OFFER $10 TO 6 CRIMSON.

THE members of the team are going to Princeton with but one idea in their heads, and that idea is that the Princeton they will have to put up ten dollars each time, and then some, and that the cricket will be one of the best they have ever had. No one is overconfident, but they are all full of confidence that their spirit, real fighting spirit and one that will never say die.

Harvard supporters on the other hand, are feeling pretty cocky over the outcome of the game, and are willing to stake their year's allowance and then some, procured by changed automobile tires to the various money lenders and old clothes men around the square. While there ain't no such animal as a fixed betting ratio, Crimson supporters are willing to give 10 to 6 and better to get a chance to spend their money, and there's but little in sight even at these outlandish odds.

LAST WORKOUT THE HARDEST.

IN the last big workout prior to the departure of the eleven, the team got so hard a drill as any passed out for a long time.

The preliminary work was defensive against the second team, the latter aggregation using Princeton formations. As if that were any news.

Then the varsity lined up against the subs composing Team B and for twenty minutes went to it tooth and nail. By the way, one of the coaches today unearthed a perfectly good tooth that is alleged to have come from the mouth of Wendell, Harvard's captain and fullback last year. Further it is alleged that it was jolted out during the Dartmouth game two years ago, and coaches and members of the squad are now trying to find out whether the dentist did a good matching job on the new one. It is suggested that this bit of bone or whatever teeth are, be trimmed with Crimson and Green ribbon and safely encombed in a glass case, be put on exhibition in the Harvard Trophy Room.

Yale Slump Causes Ticket Demand Drop

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 7.—Judging from the announcement made today by the ticket department of the Yale Football Association, the poor showing of Captain Ketchum's team is cutting down the demand for tickets for the Princeton game. The department announces that it can fill late applications for tickets. This is something that has not happened in years.

Carney Leads De Oro.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Joseph Carney outplayed Alfred De Oro, the three-cushion billiard champion, in the second block of their match for the title by a score of 65 to 54. The score now stands Carney, 100, De Oro, 84.

Poisoned Blood Quickly Cleansed

In Any Form of Blood Trouble the Cure is Rapid.

An astonishing record of serious blood poisoning is daily brought to our attention. And most if not all these startling calamities could be averted were the blood purified, toned and purified in advance by that wonderful remedy known everywhere as S. S. S. Few people realize how quickly the system becomes infected with the acids and ferments from unassisted food, constipation and inactive kidneys.

The symptoms are fever, thirst, excitability, dry skin, followed by rash, and many indications wrongly diagnosed as rheumatism poisoning. This condition is almost universal in all climates and is quickly overcome by the action of S. S. S. Many people who are hastily from violent fever are simply suffering from the effects of poisoned blood, produced by faulty elimination. But by far the greatest peril is the daily danger from bruises, contusions, the scratch of a rusty nail, insect bites, poisoning and the house fly that deposits the germs of Typhoid, Malaria, Diphtheria and other malignant diseases.

The medicinal properties of S. S. S. are relatively just as essential to well balanced health as are the nutritive properties of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food. And if you will bear this fact in mind and get your blood under the dominating influence of S. S. S. you will not only drive out those impurities that cause Rheumatism, Catarrh, Eczema, Pimples, Boils and this poisonous blood, but you will feel anew the spirit of health that can come only from a purified blood stream.

Do not accept anything else in place of S. S. S., pay no attention to the "Just as Good" clat on of those who would sacrifice your health to make an extra profit. S. S. S. contains no mineral, no crude drugs, nothing but the most wonderful botanical tonics. So be sure and get S. S. S. and avoid disappointment. Get a bottle at once and write for free advice to The Swift Specific Co., 212 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

If You Read the Papers Carefully

You may have concluded that we're somewhat remiss in our duty in having nothing to sell at less than it's worth. Or that manufacturers of men's clothes had been so busy turning out stuff to sell at "quarter-off" or "½ less than regular" that they hadn't had time to make any of the known-quality, standard value goods, such as we carry.

Much as we regret that we have to ask $12.50 for $12.50 Suits and Overcoats, and so on up to $55 for $55 Overcoats, we're consoled by the knowlege that no other store gives so much value for the money as we do, and we have the further satisfaction of doing a straight business with straight goods at straight prices.

Any man who wants Good Clothes and his money's worth can come here and choose from the largest stock and widest variety in New England—every garment high grade, all wool and fully guaranteed. And when you read of an apparently low price elsewhere, remember that you can always come to this Live Store and do better.

Here are two out of hundreds of instances of our greater value-giving. Compare them with anything you'll find elsewhere. Prove to your own satisfaction that while we're "A Little Out of the Way It Pays to Walk"

Genuine Triple-Milled Carr's Melton Overcoats

Carr's Melton fabrics are made in Huddersfield, England, and known and worn around the world. A trade-mark stamp on the back of every yard identifies the genuine. These coats were made from our own importation of best quality Carr's—full 32-oz. weight—triple-milled—in blacks, blues and oxfords. They are made up in the very best possible manner—finely hand tailored all the way through—with highest grade linings and trimmings. The usual price for Carr's Melton overcoats is $40 to $50—and the coats are not always equal to these in quality, at that.

Our Price Which is our regular price $27.50 Or $32.50 with finest quality satin lining

Fifteen-Dollar Overcoats

These coats are wonders, and we know whereof we speak when we say that such $15 coats as these are never less than $20—more often $22.50—elsewhere. They're lined and trimmed with rich silk and satin where the ordinary coat has only venetian—all hand tailored with utmost care—all styled and finished in the best possible manner. A tremendous stock and almost endless variety—chinchillas and all the other popular fabrics—some full lined and some plaid back—single or double breasted—regular or shawl collar—with plenty of conservative, velvet collar, blacks and oxford

Schoolboys Question Maranville for Advice

Pilgrims' Star Tells Group of Young Athletes the Proper Method of Training the Arms and Legs.

By WALTER J. (RABBIT) MARANVILLE

Rabbit Maranville

I HAD the pleasure of talking for a whole hour with several schoolboy athletes yesterday afternoon. I hardly believe there was a question pertaining to baseball that I was not asked to answer. The boys all showed the right spirit when they repeatedly followed one question after another. One rather ambitious chap stood to one side, and I made note of every thing that was said. After the reception which took place at the stage door of the National Theatre, after my performance there, I was requested to give each of the boys my autograph, which I wrote on their several cards.

One young man waited until after the others had gone, and asked me the following question: "Do you think, Mr. Maranville," he began, "that a young fellow is doing the right thing when he gives up his work to play ball, during the day?" To this rather important question I answered, by all means no

WANTED TO EARN LIVING ON DIAMOND.

I explained that his work kept him from playing ball, and with this as a reason he said he had decided to give up working days and get a night job, so he could devote a good deal of his time to baseball. Eventually earn his living on the diamond.

I believe that after our conversation which was rather a lengthy one, he changed his mind. If a boy has a good position and no one has ever advised him if young baseball player it would be the best in the world for him to stick to his work. A ball player, in my opinion cannot be made. It is my honest belief that a player has to be born with ball playing at his end of that you may be sure. Any manager can be keen a youngster on the fact can tell in a short time whether he is a manufactured or natural born player.

There are numerous amateurs, who if they were to play ball all their lives would never make a big league player. This does not of course mean that all is a pioneer thing. If one happens occasionally, that a youngster finally acquires a base ball knowledge, but after all if he is not adapted to the diamond, he only is a failure.

The promoters of the six day bicycle race, which starts its fifth day at the Arena at 4 o'clock this afternoon, will need Alf Grenda, the big Tasmanian rider, and a group of cyclists at the track this morning in an effort to secure a new partner for Grenda, so that he can continue in the grind.

Grenda's partner, Paddy Hehir, withdrew from the contest after a spill which resulted in the breaking of his collarbone. This happened at 10 o'clock last night, and, in order to comply with the rules of the contest, Grenda rode until midnight without a partner and then began a search for a new teammate.

Grenda was considered the most dangerous man in the event and the promoters do not wish to lose his services if it can be helped.

It is believed that either Frank Caverly, Morgan's partner, Frank Corry, Kenny's mate, or Willie Coburn, who teamed up with Clarence Carman, will drop out of the race and give their place to Grenda.

If Grenda succeeds in getting a partner he will have to forfeit a lap, according to the rules, and this means a consulting of the unfinished sprints which also marked the grind all week, as friends will not let up in his efforts to run up loot ground.

Hehir's injury was a severe blow to Grenda, as he and his teammate were about by many to win the race.

Joe Eagan Will Give Gallant Hard Battle

South Boston Lightweight Will Depend Upon Skill in Order to Beat Rival

By JACK CONWAY.

A BOXER with a good left hand will test his skill against a rugged, aggressive fighter when Joe Eagan and Gilbert Gallant clash in one of the twelve-round bouts in the double wind-up at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday evening. Eagan is one of the most finished performers in New England, while Gallant may always be relied upon to make a good showing.

Eagan believes he will conquer Gallant. He is acquainted with the Chelsea boy's style of fighting, and says he will outpoint him. Eagan and Gallant have already met once. The contest was staged in Gloucester, and Gallant was awarded the decision after Eddie Mack, Eagan's manager, declared at the time that his principal was given a poor deal and that he should have received a draw at the very least.

The South Boston boy lost the decision to Gallant just before he started his hurricane campaign which terminated in a match with Eddie Murphy. Joe has improved a great deal during the past year, and says that if he defeats Gallant he will start after a tussle with Matty Baldwin, and if he secures a date with the Charlestown boy and defeats him he will demand a "go" with Eddie Murphy.

Gallant is not worried over Eagan's statements. He has won his last three bouts, and does not fear the Peninsular lightweight in the least. He admits that Joe is a clever boxer, but says that his body blows and aggressive tactics will cause the downfall of Mack's champion.

CHICK TO BATTLE LOUGHERY.

THE other twelve-round encounter which will be between Joe Chick, the pride of dear old Gloucester, and Frank Loughery of Philadelphia, has aroused considerable interest. This should be a slashing battle, as both men are typical fighters.

Chick has fought Young Jasper in this city twice and each contest was a hurricane affair. Joe performs along the same lines that made Battling Nelson famous. He knows very little about scientific boxing and depends almost entirely upon his aggressiveness and punching ability in order to win his bouts. The Gloucester boy is blessed with wonderful recuperative powers and comes back strong after being battered around the ring by an opponent.

Loughery boxes somewhat like Chick. He is a rough tough fellow and usually gives satisfaction. He recently showed before Matty Melville A. C. in Rhode Island and won a decision over Kid Alberty who had claimed the welterweight championship as a result of his win over Phil Cross in New York.

There will be two six-round preliminaries. Bob Brennan of Charlestown will meet Peter Brune of Boston, while Bob Smiley of Cambridge will clash with Jerry McAuliffe who hails from Cambridge.

BROOKS AND GOODWIN MEET.

TERRY BROOKS, the hard hitting New York lightweight, will exchange blows with Cy Goodwin of this city in a six round encounter in Portland, Me., this evening. Brooks has been in Portland for several days and is prepared to put up a rugged battle. Terry hopes to win by a knockout, one of the limit. There are few New England 143 pounders who can hit as hard as Brooks. Brooks and Goodwin have a return match more. The contest was staged at the Atlas A. A. and was stopped by the referee in the fifth session when Goodwin was on the verge of being knocked out.

Joe Geary, the Roxbury middleweight and our old friend and co-worker Mike "Twin" Sullivan have been signed to meet in Portland a week from tonight.

BROWN SHOULD GET CHANCE.

A decade or so ago New England, and particularly Greater Boston, was represented by some of the greatest boxers in the world. There are still some stellar performers in this section of the country, but none of them are champions. One of the chief reasons why there are so few more ring men developed in New England is because there are so few boxing clubs.

When a local boxer proves that he possesses the goods, he should be pushed to the front, and not be forced to remain idle, like Mickey Brown of Malden. Brown is one of the most promising boxers in New England, and yet he cannot seem to keep busy, while boxers who come from outside of New England do not experience much difficulty in getting dates at local clubs.

Brown has been trying to secure a bout with either Jimmy Coulon or "Kid" Williams. There is little prospect of Coulon agreeing to meet Brown, as he is going back, and does not intend to enter a ring with a boy who can really fight, if such a thing can be avoided.

A sale of animals as pets by the suffragist workers at the Festival at the Copley Plaza received a severe setback when officials of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals demanded that no more be sold, on the ground that they pass into the hands of fanciers who know nothing of the way in which they should be cared for.

On the promise of the suffrage leaders that none would be sold except to people who were capable and willing to care for their pets, the sale was allowed to proceed.

The society with the long name has been reluctant about entering into any controversy with the suffragists, ever since its agents killed the famous horse "Asquith" with which enthusiasts were touring the country.

Upon learning of the sale of animals at the festival, however, agents were sent post-haste, to find out the conditions under which they were being sold.

President Rowley of the M. S. P. C. A. declared:

"We told the ladies that we objected to the sale of the small animals going into the hands of children and irresponsible persons who did not know how to care for them and to have them ultimately die of starvation and lack of proper care. They told us that animals were going to the best of homes and would be given the best of treatment, and would not be sold to anyone whom the person selling them did not know. Under these conditions we allowed the animals to be sold."

This afternoon there will be another vaudeville performance and the festival will close tonight with a grand ball opened by Miss Florence Fleming Noyes, with the "Dance of Triumph," from the overture in "Aida."

Puzzle—Who's Coming?

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service

HE isn't in the picture—but it's a good portrait of him just the same—the sort of man that everything he owns is glad when he comes home! Tray, the dog, knows just what a kindly roughing hand he has—just how it feels on his soft ear, the place that likes to be rubbed the most. So, the kitten, hasn't had to live so very long yet to know that he'd get a smoothing palm down his back and some delicious fussing under his furry cheeks. The little kid on her mother's hip squirms and kicks and calls in shrieks to him long before he's near enough to hear. And nobody in all the mixed family knows him so well—knows how tender a hand he has—how good it is to have him—as the little mother whose heart swells and warms beneath her blouse, whose lips curve, whose eyes crinkle and shine when she sees his long stride coming home. When you pass a scene like this at twilight you don't need a picture of the man to know him. I know, because I have had much knowledge of such a man—my own Dad.

Pa had a lot of fun with Elija. Pa & me was in the living room when Elija called to see Alice & we all got to talking about how young men drink nowadays. The way it runs up Elija was telling about a young man that worked for the same firm that he did. & how he got fired because the boss saw him taking a glass of beer, & it served him right, sed Elija. The wicked man!

Wicked man is right, sed Pa. I am glad that he left the place ware you work. There is always danger of a bad companyon teaching a dozen other boys bad habits. Do you ever drink, Elija? sed Pa.

Not I, sed Elija. Pure, cold water is what I drink, & very litiel of that.

You are a kind of a dry cuss, ain't you, sed Pa. Wen I was yure age I was quite a tank, sed Pa. There was suething wet going down my throte a good part of the time. My employers knew it, too, sed Pa, & they wud have liked to fire me only they cuddent get anybody to talk my place. As I grew colder I reelised the folly of drink, Pa sed, & now I never touch anything. I was just going to call Pa a fibber but he winked at me.

I used to drink, too, sed Elija. Wen I was a few years younger than I am now I gaiv whiskey a terribul battle. I drank sumtimes as much as half a dozen high balls in a day, he sed. But I soon find it was wrecking my helth, sed Elija, so I cut down to one a day, & after a while, wen I thought my nerves & my hart wud stand the shock, I quit altogether.

You must have been very, very brave, sed Cousin Alice.

I think I may say that it took a grate deal of currage, sed her beau. For months & months after I quit I was in a frietful state of nervus collapse, but in the course of time my strong constitushun calm to my aid, & I began to feel myself growing stronger. It was a different kind of strength, too, he sed. Not the strength born of half a dozen high balls, but the reel strength that cums from good food & fresh air. Today all the old craving has gone away, sed Elija, & the three years that I drank seem like three years of sum strange dreem. I do not supose that I was ever reely sober during all that time.

I do not supose you were, sed Pa. You certainly passed thru a dreadful ordeel & calm out of it with flying colors. It is not every young man that wud have the currage to quit drinking after he had got to the point ware he took six drinks in a single day. I think it is wunderful, sed Pa.

After Elija was gone Ma sed There is a yung man to be admired.

Yes, indeed, sed Pa. Just think of it, six drinks in a singel day. If I ever drank that much I wud almost be ashamed to tell of it, sed Pa. Dount ever start drinking, Alice, sed Pa, because I am sure Elija feels that the which touch liquor shall never touch his.

I dount ever intend to drink, sed Alice, but I ain't going to Marry Elijah. He wuddent get along with papa, sed Alice. Papa can drink six highballs at once. Papa wud dislike Elijah.

Yes, sed Pa & papa wud be right.

Tom, Dick or Harry?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a little in need of your most valuable advice, and I am therefore addressing this letter to you, trusting you can give me your answer as soon as you can through the AMERICAN.

I am a young girl, just past eighteen, and have never been out with any boys or men. I do go out with girls, but very seldom, and as I am not a bad looking girl, but one with some common sense, don't you think it would be detrimental to myself if I should seek the company of young men? I do not like just to go out and have a good time like my other friends do? Some of my girl friends are a little inclined to be sarcastic about my not wanting to go out with every Tom, Dick and Harry, but I have decided that I would rather take the advice of some one more learned. Thanking you I am,

ONE OF YOUR ADMIRERS.

SO they make fun of you because you don't want to go out with every Tom, Dick and Harry, just to be going.

Well, in my opinion, the joke is not on you at all.

What's the fun of going out with a man you don't like?

What sort of a "good time" can you have when you're with people who don't appeal to you in any way?

I'd rather sit at home with a five-cent bag of popcorn and a good book from the Public Library than to go to dinner in the smartest restaurant in Boston with some loud, voiced, coarse vulgarian who made me ashamed of him and of myself for being with him every time he opened his mouth.

I ran away to a dance once when I was a girl.

I was visiting my aunt in a country town, and I thought she was too particular about the company I kept, and so one night there was a party at another village near by and a man I had met at a Sunday school picnic asked me to go to the party with him. My aunt wouldn't hear of such a thing, but on the night of the party she went to visit a sick friend and I went to the party with the man my aunt didn't like.

A BAD PARTNER

When we got to the party the man turned out to be the worst dancer in the room. He stepped all over my toes, he tore my pretty dress; he talked so loud and acted so queer that everybody in the place was laughing at him—and at me.

There was nothing really wrong about the man—he was good enough as far as his morals went—but he was just a sort of coarse buffoon. I remember when the musicians went to supper my man got hold of the brass viol and tried to play it, and made a noisy nuisance of himself in general. About 12 o'clock I pretended to have a sick headache—and went home, with my poor beau expostulating all the way.

HER LESSON

My aunt never said a word to me about the party or about my beau.

She didn't have to.

I had learned my lesson—that time.

A little later I had to learn it all over again. I was in a strange city, living in a strange boarding house—among strangers. There were some people in the house who were very nice to me. I didn't like them very well, but I allowed myself to become very familiar with them.

For ten years those people followed me like some decree of fate. I left that city—went among friends of a very different sort, but wherever I was those people followed me by some hook or crook, claiming my acquaintance and demanding more of me than any of my real friends would think of asking. I paid my debt of gratitude to them over and over and over again, but they were never satisfied. Since that time I have never made a confidence of people without realizing that the time would come when those people would insist upon making a confidence of me, and I have been a little careful about going out with Tom, Dick and Harry—just to be going.

You're right, little girl—absolutely right.

Show your good sense and stay right.

"Eating" the Evidence

The counsel for the prosecution in a recent trial had a frightful cold, and when he rose to make his appeal to the jury he had in his hand a box of lozenges. In the course of his speech he had occasion to pick up a pistol bullet, which was a very important piece of evidence.

"Gentlemen," he said, "this is the bullet extracted from the body of the dead. Dow, gentlemen"—he took a lozenge—"did I say gentlemen? by the defense did murder dower day a bladol dat dis bullet would fit, ad—ad"—— He stopped suddenly; his bosom heaved, his eyes seemed starting from their sockets.

"Oh, gentlemen, gentlemen!" he cried in agonising tones; "I've swallowed the bullet."

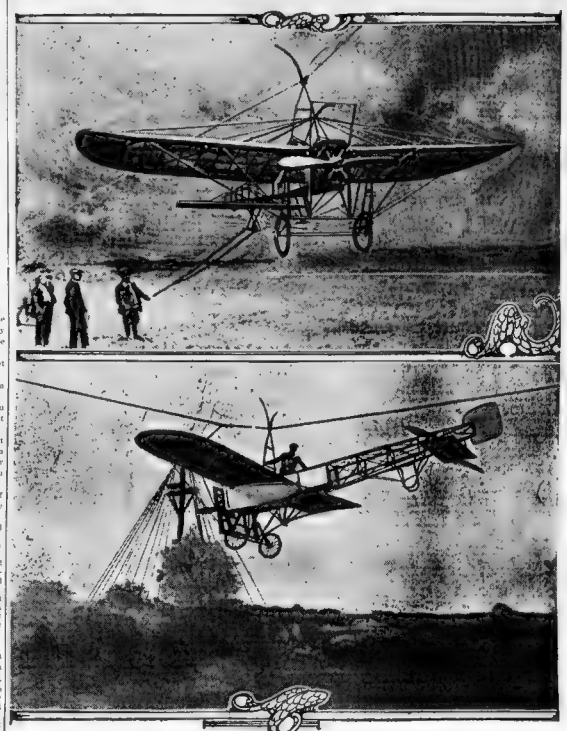
Candid Lover

The great pitcher asked the girl of his heart to marry him, and placed his left arm about her waist.

"Got to save th' other arm, sir," he explained. "Have to pitch tomorrow."

Roosts for Aviators

A CLEVER INVENTION THE IDEA FOR WHICH CAME FROM BIRDS OF THE AIR



The aeroplane roost at work—The machine approaching, and after catching hold of wire

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

THE birds of the air have roosts—then aeroplanes should have roosts also.

This idea no sooner occurred to the famous French aviator, Blériot, than he set out to realise it.

He knew that all the heavy birds find it most convenient, and often indispensable, to start their flight from a perch or roost. Sailors have found out that they can keep an albatross prisoner by simply putting it on the bridge of a ship, where it cannot make the manoeuvres necessary to launch itself in the air. In Egypt vultures are kept in captivity by placing them in a shallow hole in the sand, from which they are unable to rise upon their wings. Even the swallow, one of the most masterly of fliers, cannot take flight from a level road unless a good wind happens to be blowing. The little sparrow has a secret, perhaps, in the spring of its legs, which enables it to rise straight up from the ground, but aeroplanes are still far from rivalling the agility of sparrows, and are rather to be likened to the huge frigate-birds, which require a great deal of free space around and under them in order to bring their broad wings into effective action.

PLENTY OF ROOM

Then, too, the aeroplane has to have a very commodious ground beneath it if it is to come down to earth in safety. Starting, as nearly all do at present, with a long run on its big wheels to gather velocity, it must have a smooth way, and, if possible, a downward slope, and when it descends again it must be in a place free from obstacles. It cannot rise, for example, from a field of grain, or deep grass, and if it descends into such a field it is capsized. Even the hydro-aeroplane must have smooth water for both starting and descending. If it comes down into tossing waves it is lost.

These considerations have led Blériot, at his great experimental aviation ground at Buc, to undertake a long series of most interesting researches which are leading to results of the highest importance. Among other things they have led to the invention of a very ingenious perch, from which aeroplanes may start and upon which they may alight.

This perch consists of a cable, about 260 feet long, and suspended horizontally a few yards above the ground. Directly over the seat of the aeroplane is arranged a long V-shaped fork or clutch, whose two branches curve outward, like the erected antennæ of an insect. A little above their point of intersection is an automatic lock which springs into place, and encloses the cable, as soon as the latter has been introduced into the bottom of the fork. One of our illustrations shows the construction of the fork, and the others show how the aviator manages to introduce the cable into the fork by flying underneath it, and catching it between the two widely opened prongs. As soon as the automatic lock closes the aeroplane is a prisoner, fastened to the cable, and the friction quickly and gently brings it to rest.

This looks to one uninstructed like a very difficult manœuvre, but the experiments at Buc have proved that it is easily managed.

HOW IT WORKS

Once fastened to its perch the aeroplane can remain there as long as may be desired, and always ready to take an instant flight. The detachment from the cable when the flight begins is an extremely simple matter. The aviator starts his engine, the machine follows the direction of the cable, and, within a space of one hundred feet acquires enough velocity to sustain itself. There upon the aviator pulls a cord which opens the lock of the clutch, and the aeroplane is henceforth free, like a bird on the wing.

At present Blériot is devoting his attention to the study of the best way to utilise his aero-perch for hydro-aeroplanes starting from and landing upon skips. The decks of warships are too much encumbered to afford good manoeuvring space for aeroplanes, and Blériot's idea is to suspend his cable-perch from rods projected alongside the vessel. When the aeroplanes were not in use they would hang beside the ship somewhat like boats swung out on their davits for launching, and when the time came for starting them they would take flight with the ease of albatrosses set free.

THE KING OF DIAMONDS

BY LOUIS TRACY

A THRILLING STORY OF A MODERN MONTE CRISTO

TODAY'S INSTALMENT.

Copyright, 1904, by Edward J. Clode.

GREEN was ready in five minutes. He learned that a stable boy must crouch at their feet to bring the dog-cart back. It was the property of the Fox and Hounds' proprietor.

Very unwillingly the horse swung off again toward the moor. There was little conversation. The driver was taciturn, the Londoner somewhat scared by the dark loneliness.

At the Grange House they were met by Phillip Anson. He stood in the open doorway. He held a handkerchief to his lips and spoke in a husky voice, the voice of one under the stress of great agitation:

"That you, Green? Just give my boy to the driver and return to the village. Here is a five-pound note. Pay your bill and go back to London by the first train tomorrow. I stop here some few days."

The astonished servant took the note. Before he could reply his master turned, crossed a room feebly lighted by a dull lamp and passed through a curtained doorway.

Green was staring perplexedly at the house, the kitchen, his ill-favored companion carrying Phillip's portmanteau within, when he heard his master's voice again, and saw him standing between the partly drawn curtains, with his face quite visible in the dim rays of the lamp.

"Green?"

MORE INSTRUCTIONS

"Yes, sir."

"Here are my keys. Unlock the bag and take the keys with you. You remember the small portmanteau in my safe at Park Lane?"

"Yes, sir."

"Open the safe, get that bag and send it to me tomorrow night by train to the Station Hotel, York."

"Tomorrow night, sir?"

"Yes."

The keys were thrown with a rattle onto a broad kitchen table. Evidently Mr. Anson would not brook questions as to his movements, though his few words sounded contradictory. Green got down, unharnessed the portmanteau and went back to the dog-cart.

"They've queer folk t' r' grange," said the stable boy, as they drove away. "There's a barrow-night and a lady as nobody ever sees, an' a dochtor, an' a man—him as kem for ye."

"Surely they are well known here!"

"Not a bit of it. On'y him here about a week. T' doctor chap's very chirpy, but you either is a rum 'un."

Green was certainly puzzled very greatly by the unexpected developments of the last few minutes, but he was discreet and well trained.

He liked his young master, and would do anything to serve his interests. Moreover, the ways of millionaires were not the ways of other men. All he could do was to hear and obey.

He slept none the less soundly because his master chose voluntarily to bury himself, even for a little while, in such a weirdly tumbledown, old mansion as the Grange House.

'Revenge Is Mine; I Will Repay'

"CAN'T I have a light?" said Phillip, with head screwed round to ascertain if the doctor were following him.

Some sense, whether of sight or hearing he knew not, warned him of movement at hand, an impalpable effort, a physical tension as of a man laboring under extreme but repressed excitement.

He paid little heed to it. All the surroundings in this weird dwelling were so greatly at variance with his anticipations that he partly expected to find further surprises.

Dr. Williams did not answer. Phillip advanced a halting foot, a hesitating hand groping for a door.

Instantly a stout rope fell over his shoulders, a noose was tightly drawn, and he was jerked violently to the stone floor of the passage. He felt pressure on his face, hurting his nose and mouth. The shock jarred him greatly, but his hands, free but his arms, were free, and, with the instinct of self preservation that replaces all other sensations in moments of extreme peril, he strove valiantly to rise.

But he was grasped by the neck with brutal force, and some one knelt on his back.

"Philip Anson," hissed a man's voice, "do you remember Jacky Mason?"

So he had fallen into a trap cunningly prepared by what fiendish combination of fact and artifice he had yet to learn. Jacky Mason, the skulking criminal of Johnson's Mews. Was he in that man's power?

Under such conditions a man thinks quickly. Phillip's first ordered thought was of relief. He had fallen into the clutches of an English brigand. Money would settle this difficulty, if all other means failed.

"Yes, yes," he gurgled, half strangled by the fierce pressure on his throat.

"You hit me once from behind. You can't complain if I do the same. You sent me to a living hell for ten years—not your fault that it wasn't forever. Sit still! Not all your money can save you now. I am judge and jury, and hell itself. You are dying—dying dead!"

And with the final words droned into his ears with bitter intensity Phillip felt a terrible blow descend on his head. There was no pain, no fear, no poignant emotion at leaving the world he held so dear to him. There was an awful shock. A thundercloud seemed to burst in his brain and he sank into the void without a groan.

Now, in falling, the hard, felt hat he wore dropped in front of his face. The first wild movement of his head tilted it forward, but the savage jerk given by his assailant brought the rim slightly over his skull again.

In the almost complete darkness of the passage, Mason could not see the slight protection this afforded to his victim, and the sledge-hammer blow he delivered with a life-preserver—that murderous implement named so utterly at variance with its purpose—did not reveal the presence of an obstacle.

He struck with a force that would have stunned an ox; it must have killed any man, he the hardest-skulled aborigine that ever breathed. But the stout rim of the hat, though crushed like an eggshell, took off some of the leaden instrument's tremendous impact. Phillip, though quite insensible, was not dead. His sentient faculties were annihilated for the time, but his heart continued its life-giving functions, and he breathed with imperceptible flutterings.

THE COWARDLY VILLAIN

Mason rose, panting with excitement, glutted with revenge, but balked. He lifted his victim's inert form with the ease of his great strength.

"Come on!" he shouted, and strode toward a door which he kicked open.

A step sounded haltingly in the passage, Grenier, the sol-disant doctor, livid now and shaking with the aguе of irretrievable crime, stumbled after his more callous associate. Unconsciously he kicked Phillip's hat to one side. He entered the room, an apartment with a boundless view of the moor.

Here there was more light than in the kitchen. The windows faced toward the northeast, and the full moon shone on a setting sun illumined a wall on the right.

"Not there!" he gasped. "In this chair; his face—I must see his face!"

Mason, still carrying the inanimate burden, laughed with a snarl.

"Stop that," he roared. "Pull yourself together. Get some brandy. I've done my work. If you can't do yours, let me finish it."

Oh, just a moment! Give me time! I hate the sight of blood. Got a towel. Bind it round his neck. His clothes! They will be saturated. And wipe his face. I must see his face."

Grenier was hysterical; he had the highly strung nervous system of a girl where deeds of bloodshed were concerned. While Mason obeyed his instructions he pressed his hands over his eyes.

"Bring some brandy, white-liver. Do you want me to do everything?"

This gruff speech was sweeter to trembling action. He went to a cupboard and procured a bottle. Mason, having placed Phillip in a chair with steadied his head against the wall, seized half a tumblerful of the neat spirit and drank it with gusto. The other, gradually recovering his self-control, was satisfied with a less potential draught.

"It will be dark soon," growled Mason. "We must undress him first, you see."

"Yes. If his clothes are not bloodstained."

"Rot! He must go into the water naked in any case. The idea is your own."

"Ah! I forgot. It will soon be all right. Besides, I know I should be upset, so I have everything written down here—all fully thought out. There can be no mistake made, then."

He produced a little notebook and opened it with uncertain fingers. He glanced at a closely written page. The words danced before his vision, but he persevered.

"Yes. His coat first. Then his boots. Clothes or linen stained with blood to be burned, after cutting off all buttons. Now, I'm ready. I will not funk matters more."

His temperament linked the artistic and criminal faculties in affinity combination, and he soon recovered his composition in a guilty partnership. It must have been the instinct of the pickpocket that led him to appropriate Phillip's watch, with its quaint shoelace attachment, before he touched any other article.

THE WATCH

"Queer thing," he commented. "A rich man might afford a better timekeeper. But there's no accounting for tastes."

Mason, satiated and stupified, obeyed his instructions like a ministering ghoul. They undressed Phillip, and Grenier, rapidly denuding himself of his boots and outer clothing, donned these portions of his victim's attire.

Then the paint tubes and the other accessories of the "grotesque" were produced. Grenier, facing a mirror placed on a table close to Phillip, began to remodel his own plastic features into a similitude to those of the unconscious man. He proved himself a master, for that in general contour they were not strikingly different.

How Thin People Can Put On Flesh

A New Discovery

This men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stirs, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your food to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of getting nourishment are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and fussy awkward diets. Quit the flesh cream rub-ons. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and start in with every one of those 4 single Sargol tablets in two weeks and see the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material to your food and every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood in easily assimilated form. Thin people gain all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the best flesh-producing elements known to chemistry. They come as tablets in a package, are pleasant, harmless and inexpensive, and all druggists sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back.

THE FAMILY CUPBOARD

A Thrilling Story of High Society Life in New York

Adapted from Owen Davis's Dramatic Success

You Can Begin This Great Story Today by Reading This First

THE opening scene is laid in the palatial home of Charles Nelson, whom the world calls a successful man. In reality Nelson's money has caused his wife to become a society leader, so that he gradually finds his home becoming more and more gloomy and less like a home. He enters his house to find his only son drunk and attempting to kiss Mary Berks, Mrs. Nelson's secretary. He upbraids the boy, who turns on his father and accuses him of maintaining another establishment uptown. Mrs. Nelson enters the room just in time to hear the accusation. Nelson confesses to her that the charge is true. Nelson leaves the home and repairs to the Alpine Apartment Hotel. His daughter determines to follow him. He telephones to the Winthrops, some close friends, for help. Alice arrives at the hotel. She begs her father to take her with him, but he refuses and sends her to the Winthrops. Alone with Mrs. Harding, his fiance, that their engagement is off temporarily. Mrs. Harding arranges to bring Mrs. Nelson to the Alpine Apartments. Nelson hears of this arrangement from Mrs. Harding, but declares his wife will probably refuse to see him.

He goes upstairs to await notification from Mrs. Harding concerning the decision of his wife. Mrs. Nelson arrives and Mrs. Harding's plan for reconciliation seems about to go through when Kitty Claire, the "other woman" in the case, walks into the hotel. Mrs. Nelson and she have words, and the wife leaves, vowing she will have nothing more to do with her husband. Kitty Claire tells the telephone operator she wants Mr. Nelson.

SHE turned to Kitty: "Name please?"

"Miss Claire," she said.

Coldly Miss Ryan answered: "Not in this house, you won't."

"Miss Claire——yes, sir," she announced into the telephone, and then turned in triumph to Kitty, "He'll be DOWN."

Whereupon she picked up her red-backed novel and ignored Miss Kitty Claire.

KITTY'S FATHER

At this moment a blowsy old fellow with obvious signs of a fatal fondness for gin entered the hall. He wore a sort of half-livery and appeared just what he was—a night-hawk cabby of the old school trying to look like a private chauffeur of the new regime. He made up for any lack of style by a manner of extraordinary cheerfulness.

"Say, Kitty," he began with an air of importance. The red-faced old man appeared like nothing in all the world so much as a little child who has a secret to tell.

"I told you to sit in the machine and keep it warm!" said Kitty angrily.

"Guess who's outside?" asked her chauffeur with a calm air of intimacy. And why not? For Jim Garrity, chauffeur to Miss Kitty Claire, was no other than her father, and he himself had carried her to church the day she was baptized Kitty May Garrity.

"Guess who's outside!" said he.

"Judging from your smile, it must be a bankeeper," said she, with a calm lack of filial respect.

"Dick Le Roy!"

"No!" Kitty fairly danced in glee. "Dick Le Roy, indeed! Her old vaudeville partner. This was Kitty's own world.

"Yes! He spots me sittin' up in the car. And the first thing I heard, somebody says 'My Gawd! Gasoline must be cheap!' "

"Name old Dick!" cried Kitty in high glee.

"You bet!" I told him you was inside. Can he come in?"

"Sure he can, why not?"

Jim ran to fetch "the same old Dick." And "the same old Kitty" crossed over to the high mantel, climbed on a conveniently placed chair and examined her reflection in the mirror. While she was arranging her hat at a more satisfactory angle Dick Le Roy entered the hallway and stopped in the door. Dick was a good looking young chap in clothes that he would have described as "classy." A "song and dance artist" was Mr. Le Roy—and he looked the part. Kitty turned joyfully to see him, and as she hopped down from her chair she seemed to drop some of her assumed refinement and to become her real self.

"Dick!"

"Kitty May!"

AN OLD FRIEND.

Kitty ran to Dick and kissed him with a warmth of real affection. In a manner expressing extreme disapproval, Miss Ryan arose and with a gesture that she took to be majestic, drew the heavy curtain of the door. They wouldn't let me get home! I'm the big dreamer, west of Chicago."

"West of Chicago ain't a scream. It's a sob."

"Dwight doing, Kitty? Don't look like four million dollars! There's even class to Jim! Got a live one?"

"Don't get fresh, I'm Kitty Claire. Forget that Kitty May thing. I'm out of the business."

"That old guy from Morristown, the gink with the wind tormentors, didn't marry you, did he?"

"No. He died, but he don't know it yet." Kitty suddenly observed the compromising aspect of the closed curtains. She crossed over and drew them apart, prepared to speak reprovingly to that telephone girl, but thought better of any exhibition of temper, on so attractive young chap, with clothes that had been built in the heart of Fifth avenue, stopped by the desk. Kitty had found that observation was the better part of valor—so she waited.

"Mr. Nelson?" said he of the Fifth avenue air, to Miss Ryan.

Kitty looked with deepening interest.

"Name, please?"

"Say to Mr. Nelson that his son has called."

Kitty's look grew intent. Even minnows might be fish when they came to her net.

"He's expecting you," said Miss Ryan affably. "He phoned you was to come right up. Show the gentleman up, William.

As Kenneth Nelson disappeared under William's guidance, Kitty came wondering back to Dick.

"I know that kid," remarked Mr. Le Roy. "Met him in the Vanderbilt bar night before last. He's a friend of Billy Webb's. You know Billy?"

"Yes," said Kitty, making a few mental notes for future reference.

A SWELLHEAD

"He's name is Mason or Nelson—something like that. Got a bad case of swelled head and an awful appetite for booze. But he's class, even if he can't remember that he met me."

But the time was not far away when Kenneth Nelson would long in vain to forget that he had met Dick Le Roy.

"Is it all right with Dottie" is, sir? I don't want to spoil notin'," said Dick with a touch of anxiety—tenderest almost.

"Why shouldn't it be all right? I'm not ashamed of my friends," Kitty could fit off with a fine little show of spirit. "You look swellier than ever, Dick, but ain't you never hungry to get back to vaudeville?"

"I quit being hungry when I quit vaudeville," said Kitty tersely.

Dick sailed—and then pleaded his cause.

"Believe me, you had a swell future!" Kitty was quiet, shy now. "Maybe. But I had a bum present. Say, Dickie boy, here's my card. Come up to see me some day. Do come!"

"Well, I declare—class, class, all West Ninety-fifth street! That's going some. When can I come? Dick tried the society manner too.

"Any old time," said Kitty perily.

"That's tonight. I got a date every other night until tomorrow. Honest, I'm awful glad to see you!"

William, the dusky deity of the elevator, shut it down to the hall. Charles Nelson stepped out to the door of the room and stood there looking coldly at Dick LeRoy.

"Hello! You took your time. This is an old friend of mine, Mr. Le Roy, Mr. Nelson."

"How are you?" said Nelson with unwavering coldness.

Dick crossed over to Nelson with assured friendliness. His hardy personal smile was blooming in full force, and his hand was extended with all the good-fellow spirit in his power.

"Glad to know you. I was just telling Kitty——"

Charles Nelson turned coldly away. He wondered to what extent he must know Kitty's—friends.

Dick Le Roy edged the astute and discerning young woman.

"Yes?" said Dick blandly.

"There were a lot of big buildings went up while you was out West. Pay you to come and look at one of them."

NELSON SEARS ALL

The handy parennial had been a bit slipped by the frost. But with a fine air of being at home in chilly reception halls or among tall bulldogs, Dick made his exit.

"I gotcher. Glad I met you, sir; see you later, Kitty; be good."

Nelson drew the curtains and stood looking sternly at Kitty.

Kitty wondered a bit uneasily if she had blundered in letting Dick penetrate the Alpine apartments. She sat on the little just-made-for-two sofa and brushed her skirts aside with a nervous flick of eyes seconded.

"Dick's all right. I used to work with him. You don't mind my asking him in here?"

Nelson sank beside her—not affectionately—almost in abstraction.

"I'm glad you came and I was here!" he asked, with a sternness that did not seem entirely due to his talk with Dick.

"I got a bit of good news about it at the office. I didn't make any fuss—honest, I didn't—but you haven't been up for a week." Her voice was like a young child's.

"It had no time." said Nelson in a tone of finality.

"I had too much—and no money. Don't be mad with me, dear." She put her hand gently on his arm. "It's not my fault that your wife knows," she added in a tone that would have inspired the maker of the proverb, "Who excuses himself, accuses himself."

Nelson folded his arms with grim force.

"You saw her?" Events were moving so fast that Charles Nelson could only watch the ebb of circumstance.

"Yes, and she knew who I was."

"What did she do?" asked the man in deep anxiety. Somehow depended upon what Emily had done when she had been brought face to face with "the other woman."

"Gave a grand imitation of an icemaking machine. I'm sorry—awful sorry."

She spoke earnestly, putting her hand on his with a firm pressure and affection as she spoke.

"And now we won't have to keep under cover."

Nelson dropped his arms to his side with a kind of reluctance.

"I don't understand you."

Again Kitty tried the lure of her little self on him. Her voice was soft, magnetic, full of the electricity of her youth and her emotion.

"She'll name me, of course. I don't pretend I like it, but what's the use? I don't care if you'll only be nice to me, Charles."

At a certain football game an Englishman and a Scotchman chanced to come, by and by, to a discussion of the English game and the Scotch game. The Englishman had a bottle of whiskey, while the Scotchman had none. A few minutes after the game began the Scot's turn was made by one of the visiting forwards.

"Good run," said the Scotchman.

"Fine," said the Englishman, and applied his lips to the bottle, ignoring Mac's thirsty glances.

Later on a goal was scored.

"Fine goal," said Mac.

"Grand," said the Englishman, taking another pull, but still offering none to his neighbor.

"I presume ye're a bit o' a football player yerself," said Mac.

"I am," was the prompt reply.

"I thought so. I knew it by the Englishman.

Claude Fleming, the famous baritone, relates an amusing instance of "passing" on the stage in San Francisco.

"Die, villain!" the hero of the drama said, and shot off the revolver at the villain's head.

But the gun didn't go off. Six times the hero pulled the trigger, and not a single explosion took place. The audience was convulsed, during which the victim struck an attitude and said:

"Your pistol has missed fire, Sir Reginald; but what difference does it make? The thought that I was to be shot has frightened me to death!"

And he rolled over and died.

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were higher in New York and lower in Boston this afternoon, the dividing line being established by reports from Washington that the Mexican situation is not so tense. In Boston the copper metal aspect was adverse to mining issues.

In the afternoon here recessions included Butte & Superior 3/4, Calumet & Arizona 1/4, North Butte 1/4, Superior 1/4, U. S. Smelting 1/2 and Calumet & Hecla 5.

Boston & Maine was up 1/2 and New Haven off 1/4. United Fruit and American Telephone were a trifle lower.

Among issues to then show gains in New York were Canadian Pacific 1, Missouri, Pacific 1/4, Southern Pacific 3/4, Union Pacific 1/2, Reading 3/8, Steel 1/4, and Amalgamated 1/2. U. S. Rubber common was off 3/4 and preferred 3/8. Northern Pacific, Lehigh Valley and American Can were fractionally lower.

Prices Higher at the Opening.

Prices were higher at the opening, due to satisfaction over the Senate Banking Committee's report in favor of having a bank in the currency bill. But a more potent influence was the covering of shorts. There was evidence since when bushings on a scale as stocks began to run down to find that support was forthcoming. Issued in New York. It was reported from Berlin that sentiment had improved at that center and money rates shows tendency towards ease. There was more talk about a good winter trade. The demand of that sort for New Haven, Mexican Petroleum had a narrower price range and U. S. Rubber was the weak issue of the morning, it declining on account of the announcement that new preferred stock to the amount of $15,000,000 with rights, would be issued. Express companies did not benefit from the extension of the time in which they are to make ready for rate reductions. Adamsdeclined to the lowest price it has touched in thirteen months.

By midday the price range was higher and the underlying sentiment apparently was regarding the Mexican situation caused forecastings during the morning and although it was generally believed that the status of affairs is serious it did not seem as much out of hand today as it was yesterday. Perhaps intervention has been partly discounted. Stocks were scarce after the first hour.

The Boston market opened fairly firm, but was quiet. It was more irregular than New York. There was not much business in mining stocks. Copper issues were weaker after the Copper Producers' Association reported that the metal supply increased last month, although this was no surprise. The lack of demand for copper even at reported price concessions is considered of more significance. It reflects contraction in trade and manufacturing. There was nothing of interest to the casual speculator about the local market. It was weak in the afternoon.

Money Rates and Movements.

There was not much change in money rates in this city or in New York. Call money loaned in the latter city this morning at 4 per cent, and time rates for five and six months hardened, being 4@4 1/2 per cent., against 4@4 1/2 yesterday, offerings on other maturities were unchanged. Known movements of money for the five bank statement days of the week indicate a gain in cash by New York banks of $8,577,630. Of this amount $7,945,630 was from the interior. For the first time in weeks banks gained upon subtreasury transactions, coming to $832,000 ahead.

It was reported from Washington this afternoon that the Mexican situation looked more favorable. What changes had taken place was not revealed at the Cabinet meeting. It is stated, the relations of the United States and Mexico was that of "drifting diplomacy." Nothing was said about the currency bill and the attitude of Democratic members of the Senate Banking Committee was not discussed. It had been thought that the question of calling a caucus might be considered

Copper Stocks Increased.

The Copper Producers' Association reported for October that stocks on hand increased 2,772,288 pounds in that month. October production amounted to 139,070,481 pounds, compared with 131,401,229 in September last and 145,405,453 in October, 1912. There had been much doubt in consuming circles as to whether an increase or decrease would be reported. Uncertainty as to this helped restrict buying.

It is reported that second hands in New York are offering 12 cent copper at from 10 1/4 to 10 3/4 cents a pound. It is understood that this class of purveyors have several hundred thousand pounds on hand. The concessions have not stimulated demand. Producers are holding out for 13 1/2 cents, with no business in sight. Exports for the week ended yesterday showed a comparative increase of 3,262 tons.

Financial News in Brief.

Copper warrants weakened again in London at the morning call, spot being off 10s, and futures 12s 6d. At the close spot had recovered 7s 6d and futures 2s 6d. Sales were 760 tons of spot and 4,100 of futures.

October commercial failures increased 28% over the total of the same month last year, according to Dun's Review; in October, 1913, total was 1434. The amount of indebtedness involved increased 64%, $4,483,229 in a total of $20,245,406. Bradstreet's agency reports that October failures were greater in number and in October of any year since 1895 and that October liabilities are the heaviest since October, 1907, the panic year.

Collectors of internal revenue have been notified by the Treasury Department that the increase in tax on the interest on bank deposits and bank certificates of deposit is not to be withheld at the source, but that all interest, whether paid or accrued, must be included in each depositor's tax return.

FACT AND COMMENT ON FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

James H. Schiff's "panic speech" yesterday at the Chamber of Commerce was roundly condemned by leading bankers. Here are specimen adjectives and expressions applied to it by different men as prominent about as Mr. Schiff himself:

"Extraordinary."

"Untimely."

"Ill-advised."

"Calculated to bring on a panic were there any smouldering elements of one."

"A great surprise."

"Entirely uncalled for."

It was with pride, Mr. Schiff said, that he recalled how he had predicted the 1907 panic. And now he felt moved to utter a similar warning—if currency legislation were not promptly passed.

Mr. Schiff's panic fears are not shared by such men as President Vanderlip of the National City Bank, Chairman A. Barton Hepburn of the Chase National Bank, John Claflin, president of the Chamber of Commerce; James Speyer, Joseph Talbert, George M. Reynolds of Chicago and many others with whom I have discussed the outlook. Even Otto H. Kahn, partner of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., of which Mr. Schiff is the head, last week declared that he was "mildly bullish" on business prospects.

Nobody expected Mr. Schiff to make a speech yesterday. His lengthy, alarmist warning of threatened disaster took every one by surprise. I interviewed numbers of leading financiers after the meeting and all expressed astonishment that Mr. Schiff had made such an extraordinary address.

Mr. Schiff, it was insisted, does not possess the influence and widespread approval elicited by Mr. Vanderlip's plan for a central bank, although it is well understood that Mr. Schiff's chief partners, Paul M. Warburg, had much to do with preparing the Aldrich scheme and Mr. Schiff approved the scheme which, of course, had as its very arch a central bank. Mr. Schiff rushed into print with a bitter criticism of the Vanderlip plan immediately it was published, but the effect upon sentiment, subsequent developments showed, was negligible. And now, it is whispered, Mr. Schiff fears that the Vanderlip scheme may win out if proper time is afforded for its study, and his fiery speech yesterday was a threat that the government had better rush through its own plan or look out for squalls bad enough to engulf the whole country in disaster.

Apparently, therefore, there are wheels within wheels—which whose movements the public do not see.

The AMERICAN stood alone in uttering plainly-worded warnings weeks and weeks ago that all was not going well and that it believed the government not to peedlessly aggravate the situation by pounding away at the juncture against business interests and also beheaded capitalists to get off their high horse and seek to pull the country as smoothly as possible over what was likely to prove this year. These warnings were sounded when optimism was running high in most places, and those most familiar with all the facts cordially agree that they were timely and did an incalculable amount of good.

But for men like Mr. Schiff, James J. Hill and Bird Grove Judge to come forward at this late stage—when things by wire handling ought to mend—and make such remarks calculated to incite panics is deplorable; bankers freely declare what is needed now is calmness, courage and an exhibition of confidence.

A conference held yesterday by one of the greatest financial institutions in America. The discussion reached was that money would work easier because of the decided slackening in trade now in progress and that, although commercial failures would continue numerous, large sums could be safely and profitably invested in sound commercial paper. To mention this fact—and it IS a fact—to end the rate that certain influential interests, who are more publicity are confident that there will be no crisis and are doing their share in helping the commercial world.

Surely that is a more useful service than stirring up nervousness, now that everyone is well aware of the necessity for caution.

* * *

It may not be amiss, in view of current happenings, to recall a homely old adage: "If you your lips would keep from slips five things observe with care: of whom you speak, to whom you speak, of what and how and where."

Bankers complained last evening that Mr. Schiff did not act up to that sensible advice.

Opportunities for Good Lie Before Democrats Elected to State Offices

The election of Mr. Thomas J. Boynton, the Democratic candidate for Attorney-General, calls attention to a very much neglected position in our political contests. The office of Attorney-General at times is more potent for good and harm to the Commonwealth than the office of Governor, but we have been long accustomed to consider it only a by-product of the gubernatorial contest.

So large a number of our citizens have been in the habit of neglecting to vote for the candidates for Attorney-General that the Republican machine has had undisturbed control of this office for years. Mr. Boynton is the first Democratic Attorney-General whom this generation has known. He is a good lawyer and has sound views on public questions. He can distinguish himself in the office, for his opportunities there will be great and his capacity is equal to them.

The record of the Democratic party in office will depend largely on the record which the Attorney-General makes. We congratulate Mr. Boynton and the Democratic party on his election.

If Mr. Mansfield is able to do nothing more in the office of State Treasurer and Receiver-General than to bring the State bonds within the means of the people of small means in the State, his election will still have been worth while.

In Philadelphia, this method of making the bonds of small denomination—one hundred dollar instead of one thousand dollar bonds—has proved a great benefit to the community.

The public service corporations must also ultimately reduce the denomination of their bonds. Mr. Mansfield can set them a good example and prove the value of the change by instituting it in behalf of the Commonwealth.

It seems to be generally acknowledged that Secretary of State Donahue, during his term of office, has justified the popular judgment in selecting him for Secretary of State. If he has done so well in his first and inexperienced year, he will surely be able to accelerate the improvements in his office now that he is under way.

Mr. Frank Pope has been an experienced and able public man for some years. His ability was recognized in the House of Representatives during his term there and his colleagues accorded him a generous measure of leadership. There has been a strong suspicion that the conditions in the office of auditor could be improved and that REAL auditing could be done in that department. Mr. Pope has undoubted capacity to grasp the problems of the office, and we expect to see him do so.

Lieutenant-Governor-elect Barry will preside over the Council. Before him will come the petitions for pardon and the sundry matters in the determination of which the Governor's Council has the constitutional right and duty to participate. Mr. Barry has served with credit in the Council and has had much experience in our criminal courts. He ought, therefore, to be well qualified for his duties.

As a good Democrat who is always loyal to his party principles, Lieutenant-Governor-elect Barry will not forget that the Democratic party for years has contended that the Governor's Council ought to be abolished because it takes away from the Governor the responsibility which the people wish to repose in him, and too often thwarts those reforms which the people seek to institute through the election of a Governor.

Therefore, Mr. Barry will use his influence to prevent the Council from embarrassing Governor-elect Walsh by insisting that they should resolve all reasonable doubts in favor of the judgment of the Governor.

This thorough house-cleaning will be good for the Commonwealth. Our physical bodies are said to change entirely every seven years. Our body politic needs a complete change occasionally. To the moss-back Republican who feels he cannot reconcile himself to the new situation, the AMERICAN suggests that he consider the feelings of a majority of the people of the United States when Abraham Lincoln was elected. Mr. Lincoln was a minority candidate, and the shock of his election was greater to his opponents than the present revolution in Massachusetts to the adherents of the old order of things.

Let the old moss back Republican consider also what Lord Erskine once said to a jury: "Cyclones may destroy our dwellings and dissipate our commerce, but they scourge before them the lazy elements without which we should stagnate into pestilence."

However destructive the new order of things may be to their own moss-grown ideals, still the State will profit, and so in the end will they also.

For Greater Safety at Sea

Representatives of the great maritime nations will assemble at London on November 14 to consider measures for the promotion of safety at sea.

The meeting is largely the growth of an initiative demand by the Hearst newspapers and by the United States, following upon the Titanic disaster of April 15, 1912.

The United States will be represented at the international conference by Representative J. W. Alexander, chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee of the House; by Senators Duncan U. Fletcher and Theodore E. Burton. Navigation Commissioner E. T. Chamberlain, Supervising Inspector-General George Uhler, Captain E. F. Berthoff, of the Revenue Cutter Service; Rear Admiral Washington L. Capps, chief constructor, United States Navy; Homer L. Ferguson, general manager Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydocking Company; Andrew Furuseth, president International Seaman's Union; Captain William C. Ballard, Superintendent Naval Radio Service, and Captain George F. Cooper, United States Navy, hydrographer.

It is not beyond truth to say that the United States has been in the van in the adoption of all practical measures for ocean safety long before the Titanic's loss.

And with good reason. The United States furnishes nearly two-thirds of the passengers that cross the Atlantic. Nearly two million of our people every year go over the Atlantic. We have a greater stake of life and safety on the Atlantic Ocean lines than any other or than all other people. We are the greatest travelers in the world, and it is a practical tribute to their keen sense of discrimination that the best ships in all the world are running between Europe and these republican shores.

But, with all this, the AMERICAN knows all too well, from recent appalling disasters, that safety to life and property at sea is far from being an accomplished fact.

This international conference for greater safety at sea is therefore one of the really important events of the time. The deliberations of these delegates are likely to consume many weeks and perhaps run over into the new year.

Much of lasting benefit to mankind must result from their conclusions.

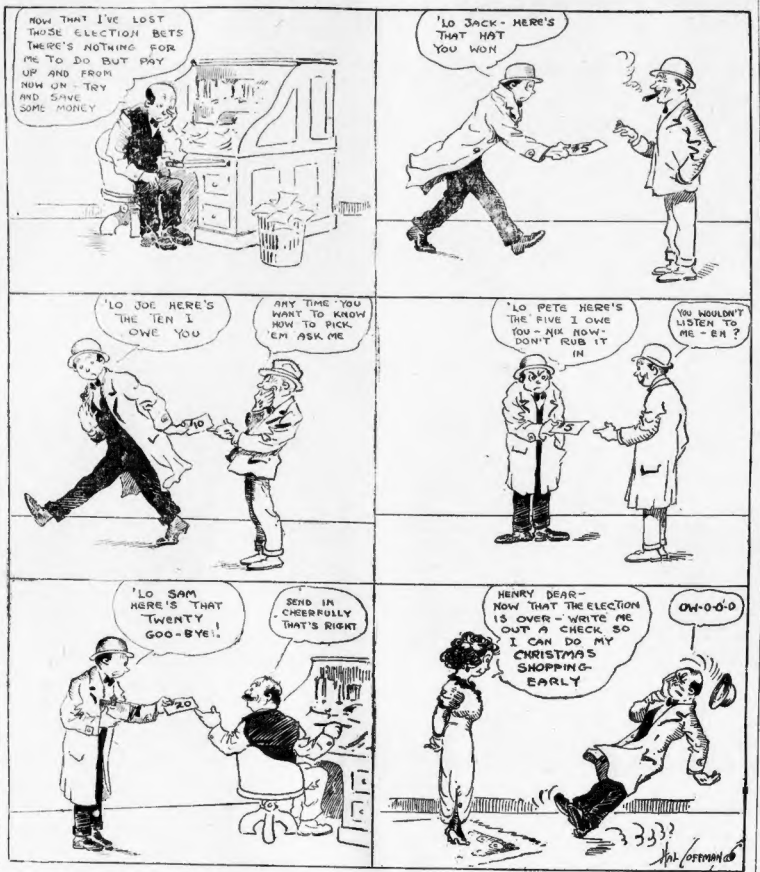
Of course Great Britain takes the lead. The United States, as usual, lags behind. England's technical bureaus have made the most elaborate researches, have expended nearly a half million dollars in preparation, and will doubtless dominate, by sheer weight of numbers and preparation, the deliberations of the convention. Other nations have gone at great length into the subject.

But our own American preparations have been so meagre and insufficient that the AMERICAN trusts our country will even yet add both in members and equipment to those already on the ground. What we have is unworthy of the occasion and of us.

This conference marks another great advance in the beneficial progress of mankind.

Shall America, which inaugurated it, have no adequate voice in the conclusions in which our people, more than any other people, are vitally involved?

And So It Goes



The Two Sisters

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER III.

WHEN there was anything practical to be done by the Marvin sisters it was Julia who took the initiative. It was she, therefore, who, after making inquiries of a friend who had worked at one time in Boston, decided to send a special delivery letter to a certain home in the great city, asking for accommodations for Caryl and herself until they could secure work and a permanent abiding place.

The address of this temporary abode was in Julia's little handbag, and she referred to it as she and Caryl emerged from the South Station on the afternoon on which the pair reached Boston. This same address had been given to the "baggage-expressman" who had passed throught the train, and he had promised to try to get their trunk to their room that same evening.

"I know," said Julia, hesitatingly, "that there is a line of cars here which will take us where we want to go. I wish I knew more about Boston!"

"Well, as you don't," proposed Caryl, "wouldn't it be well to be on the safe side and hire a cab? Let's see, this is Summer street, isn't it?"

She looked about her curiously, but not timidly. To her the whole journey and all that lay beyond it seemed an exciting adventure.

"Why not?" she mused, "for in Boston people make money very fast."

Julia's voice broke in upon her fancies. "Clara Dayton told me to take the car to the Subway and to walk to the home," she said. "Come on, dear, we can't stand here staring any longer. We must make the plunge."

Guided by a kindly policeman the girls crossed the street, but when they had reached the opposite sidewalk and a taxicab driver held up his finger inquiringly Caryl grasped her sister's arm suddenly.

"See there, Julia!" she exclaimed. "There's one of those cabs that we've heard so much about! I want to take it. Do let's get in it!"

But Julia shook her head and started on. "Not that one, Caryl," she replied hastily. "Come ahead with me and I'll explain." And, as the other obeyed reluctantly, Julia told her that she had been warned that it was not safe for a young woman to get into any cab that she might chance to meet.

"Some of those drivers are employed by bad people," she said. "I have heard that they lure young women away to dreadful places. Clara Dayton told me so and said that if I ever was ill, or anything like that, and needed a cab, to go to a regular stand for one."

Caryl laughed contemptuously. "Ridiculous!" she declared. "As if two grown up girls could be fooled as a pair of silly children might be! At any rate, I'm going to have my own way about the matter, so you may as well look up a cabstand now, for I mean to ride downtown in something besides a common old street car."

They had not far to look for a row of taxis standing at the side of a hotel had caught Caryl's eye and she piloted her sister toward one of these.

"What will it cost to take us to this place?" asked Julia, showing the man the card bearing the address which was her destination.

"That depends on how many miles it is," he replied. "The indicator there will show you how far you've gone when we stop."

"But can't you give us any idea of the price?" began Julia, but Caryl jumped into the cab and seated herself.

"Oh, come on!" she called gaily. "Don't bother about the expense. We've got money enough to blow in on a ride now and then I guess!"

Her tone rang out clearly, and the chauffeur grinned as he took his seat. A man passing paused, looked at the girls, lifted his hat and smiled. Caryl flushed brightly, but laughed. As the car started, Julia turned upon her sharply.

"We may as well begin as we mean to keep on, Caryl," she warned her, "and as I am older than you I have a right to insist that you do not behave in this way any more. In the first place, this is an extravagance, and it's wrong for us to set a pace that we cannot keep."

Caryl pouted. "Half of what the cab costs will be paid by me," she reminded her companion. "So you need not talk as if you were paying for everything, or for more than your share. And this one ride isn't going to make or break either of us—so why not enjoy it? Come, Julia, don't be cross!"

She laid her hand on her sister's arm, and the older girl spoke more gently.

"I'm not cross, sis," she replied. "But you do not appreciate how indiscreet you are, and it startled me to see that man speak to us just now. If you hadn't raised your voice as you did he wouldn't have noticed us. You must be more careful, for you don't know anything about the kind of men you may meet here in a strange city."

But the younger girl only laughed at her sister's anxiety. "Poor Julia!" she exclaimed. "You do take things so hard! You say that we may as well begin as we mean to go on. Very well, I agree with you there. The way I mean to go on is to get all the fun I can out of life. If a man likes his hat just because I happen to speak a little loudly I can't help it. So don't get pesved over such small things. Let's have a good time together in spite of father, stepmother and work. Do let's be sensible!"

"That's what I'm trying to be," said the other gravely.

"Being sensible isn't looking as solemn as you do now," teased Caryl. "Please smile!"

And, gazing into the merry eyes, the older sister smiled in spite of vague misgivings.

Women Who Refuse to Hush Up

By the REV. C. F. AKED, D. D., L. L. D

THERE is deep significance in the fact that it is women who reject the policy to hush up. Men may seek to walk in the old ways of concealment and subterfuge. They will not succeed. For one good reason amongst many—the women will not let them.

Miss Ida Green of the Young Women's Christian Association tells the City Council of Oakland that the play, "The Traffic," ought to go on—ought! And she repeats and reiterates the ground of her demand: A knowledge of the hideous facts with which the play deals deepens hatred of all that produces those evil conditions and fosters them and gives to them their hateful power. Almost the entire story of the entrance of women into a conflict with vice is in Miss Green's contention. What remains is hardly worth telling. "Let the facts be known," Miss Green said in effect to the Council, "and they will be hated. Let them be hated and they will be fought. Let them be fought, and victory will rest with the forces of morality and clean living."

The Oakland City Council paid no heed. They prohibited the performance of "The Traffic." But they have not silenced Miss Green. Neither will they and the like of them silence the women who, in every country in the civilized world, agree with Miss Green and demand that the vile things of darkness shall be dragged into the light, satisfied that when they are seen and known for what they are the essential rightness of our human nature will make an end of them.

Another illustration comes from Hartford, Ct. "A "white slave traffic" prosecution nearly two years ago involved painful revelations. Toleration of the social evil had ended in making Hartford a recognized centre of the traffic in girls. The mayor of the city resolved upon a "clean-up." Houses of ill fame were closed. A vice commission was appointed by the Mayor to inquire and report with a view to the most drastic treatment of the evil which might seem practical. The City Council refused to make an appropriation for the expense of the mayor's commission! Money was found by good men and women, and the report was issued last July.

The report was like every other that has been issued within the last ten years, probably within the last twenty. There has not been within that period any thoroughgoing, scientific investigation of the social evil conducted by a public body anywhere in the world which has not reported against toleration, against segregation, and in favor of suppression. The Hartford commission reported that "the policy of keeping the houses closed must be rigidly adhered to." Funds were exhausted. Only five hundred copies of the report could be published. The City Council refused to make an appropriation for the circulation of the report.

Then it was the turn of the women! The Woman Suffrage Association reprinted the report, and placed it on sale at the Suffrage headquarters in the midst of the shopping district. Public sentiment was aroused. The City Council was not—except to a policy of yet more masterly inactivity. A member of the Council moved that the Council register its approval of the policy of repression. Including his own, there were five votes cast for the resolution—and twenty-four against! Five out of twenty-nine were willing to go on record as firmly opposed to the municipal toleration of vice and loyally anxious to make war upon it.

But the Hartford City Council had not done with the women. Outside the suffrage headquarters in Hartford there stands today—unless the policy of the hush-up has succeeded in defacing or destroying it within the last week or two—a six-foot signboard with these huge lines upon it:

MOTHERS OF HARTFORD!
DO YOU KNOW HOW THE FOLLOWING MEMBERS OF THE CITY COUNCIL,
WHO CLAIM TO REPRESENT YOU, VOTED IN REGARD TO THE SUPPRESSION OF COMMERCIALIZED VICE?

And then followed the names of the twenty-four who love darkness rather than light because their thought is muddled.

Alongside this was another placard: "Come in and get a pamphlet free, telling what the vote of these twenty-four men means to you."

The significance of these things must not be lost. The blindest reactionary cannot afford to ignore it. East and West are one, and there is no North or South in this fine enthusiasm for the suppression of a world-wide wrong. Oakland answers back to Hartford, Denver to Atlanta, Minneapolis to Mobile. The "necessary evil" talk has been heard for centuries. Men have persuaded themselves, all over the world, that it was necessary that millions of women should be brutalized, debauched, dehumanized, reduced to a condition of essential slavery compared with which the old chattel slavery was a paradise, for their pleasure, for the gratification of instincts which they were not men enough to control.

Meanwhile, "good women," by which the man of the world really meant his women, owned in a slightly different way from the others, were to be kept in ignorance of all this. He knew that they were not ignorant, and they knew that he knew that they were not ignorant; but the solemn farce had received all but a religious sanctity, and—

And now women have had enough of this foolery! If men are not ashamed of doing these things, women are not going to be ashamed of knowing that men do them. And they are going to put a stop to it. Publicity is a weapon in the fight. Knowledge is effective. "Let there be light"—it is not only the creative fiat. It is a redeeming and regenerating word. "Let us have done," our women are saying, "with concealment and hypocrisy and pretense. You think we are immoral? Much you care for the modesty of the millions of women you have made prostitutes for your pleasure. Cease from lying. Cease from lying to your own souls. You do not want the facts known because you want no interference with your pleasure, and your pleasure is a crime."

The chief of police of Los Angeles told the National Association of Police Chiefs when it met in Washington last Summer that women had done the greatest service in breaking down a wall of false reticence which has prevented public discussion and public understanding of one of the most vital problems of crime.

Of which many other chiefs of police may take note.

THE GOOD CITIZEN

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

He often told his fellow men
That he was a good citizen;
He watched his neighbors every day
Lest one of them might go astray.
He saw that each man paid his tax;
And stirred them up when they were lax.
He told them how to buy and sell,
And how to rear their children well.
He was a trustee, tried and true,
A member of the school board, too.
And often swore, with many a frown,
No wrong should creep into his town.
He never fed a tramp—not he!
That would encourage vagrancy.
The righteous soul within him shrank
From any man who gamed or drank;
And once he had a luckless maid
Sent from the home where she had strayed.
When he had gone beyond the skies
Hoping to put the angels wise,
Saint Peter took one look at him
And then remarked in accents grim:
"Go down to Satan's brimstone pens;
He needs a few good citizens."
